A BIG JOB, INDEED!

Nancy Periera and Michael Young, president of the San Anselmo Lions Club, couldn't believe all the eggs—about 3,600—they had to dye for today's annual Easter egg hunt sponsored by the Lions. Tim Haggerty unloads cartons in the background. The hunt was held at San Anselmo's Memorial Park. The Lions donated the eggs and some of the prizes and high school and college students and part-time helpers assisted in the massive dye job.

Postal Workers Defy Plea; Mail Stoppages Spreading

President Hints At Army Use

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Postal workers defied the federal government and their own union leaders Saturday and continued their illegal coast-to-coast strike. President Nixon issued a veiled warning that he might call out troops Monday morning to get the mails through.

Mailmen's strike votes threatened to affect the entire 700,000-employe post office system, disrupting business, commerce and private lives by the beginning of the week.

NIXON VIEW

In an impromptu White House news conference, Nixon refrained from mentioning army and national guard troops specifically, but he said he had "the means to deliver the mail and we will use those means."

The administration has been reluctant to use troops so far in the four-day old walkout, but the refusal of the postal workers to abide by an agreement worked out by their leadership and the administration Friday left Nixon with little other recourse.

But the president grimly told reporters, "On Monday I will meet my constitutional obligations to see that the mails go through."

The President said the postal workers in many areas have legitimate grievances and "We are prepared to negotiate those."

NOT WHILE OUT

"But under no circumstances will discussions be held with government employes when they are out on illegal strike."

The postal workers maintain they will not go back to work until Nixon promises them higher pay in a long simmering and bitter dispute that has seen the mailmen promised pay increases that were later postponed.

SAN FRANCISCO

The spreading postal strike brought post office operations today in San Francisco almost to a standstill.

Robert Jones, a post office spokesman, said all through mail—including letters to servicemen in Vietnam—will be diverted away from this regional processing point.

The situation, he said, is "deteriorating," and the number of men and stations working was unclear.

About half of the city's 1,400 letter carriers reported for work on the morning shift. At various of the city's 50 sub-

Night Battle Kills Young Novato Hero

A highly decorated young Green Beret officer from Novato has become the 32nd Marinite killed in action in the Vietnam War.

Capt. James Michael Gribbin, 21, of 1086 Simmons Lane, was killed Tuesday while holding off a night assault by Communist forces at an undisclosed location, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Louis Ondrasek.

Gribbin—who, at 19, was the youngest in a 1967 graduating class at the Army Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga.—was battalion commander of a Special Forces unit and held three Bronze Stars for bravery.

Born in San Francisco, Gribbin moved to Novato eight years ago and was a 1967 graduate of Novato High School, where he played on the football team. He joined the Army upon high school graduation.

In addition to this mother, he is survived by three brothers, Dennis Gribbin, Robert Gribbin and Mark Ondrasek; a sister, Kelly Ondrasek; his father, James Gribbin of San Francisco, and grandfather, James Edison Gribbin of San Francisco.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

San Rafael's Post Office Still Working

San Rafael post office employees were working as usual today, Edgar Fisher, assistant postmaster, said, but no national mail for Marin was being received through San Francisco.

Fisher said some national mail for Marin was coming through Oakland, but "the greater quantity" usually comes through San Francisco.

There is also some doubt, he said, as to whether national mail from Marin was being processed at San Francisco.

San Rafael Postmaster Hugh Cassidy reported yesterday that postal employees at Rincon Annex in San Francisco at first refused to accept Marin mail addressed to places around the country.

When the San Rafael employees threatened to just leave the mail on the loading dock, the San Francisco employees accepted it, he said.

Fisher said today, however, that there was no guarantee the mail was being processed.

Petaluma Post Office employees reported work proceeding normally there.

Bruce Calls For Firing Of Zucker

Marin County Administrator Alan Bruce, who defended County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker at a hearing on his ouster last April, yesterday recommended that Zucker be fired because he is running for county supervisor against Chairman John F. McInnis.

Bruce suggested that Werner von Gundell, chief of current planning, be elevated to acting planning director at a salary of $1,652 per month. Von Gundell now draws $1,454 per month, while Zucker gets $1,850.

The recommendations will go to the board of supervisors Tuesday.

During the hearing when McInnis and Louis H. Baar tired to fire Zucker, Bruce rose to the defense of Zucker.

Bruce declared that Zucker's decision to run for elective office without resigning from his county job "evidences unsound and immature judgment, and results in an intolerable situation as to relationships with the board of supervisors, county ad-

Sub-Teen Girls Cited For Pushing Pills, Marijuana

Juvenile officers yesterday cited four girls from Miller Creek School in Lucas Valley to the probation department after learning that they had been supplying stolen pills as well as marijuana to fellow students.

The girls ranged in age from 11 to 13 years, according to Sheriff's Deputy Jeanette Prandi.

Also cited was the 14-year-old sister of one of the girls, a Terra Linda High student, who reportedly obtained the marijuana for the youngsters.

Mrs. Prandi said that the investigation leading up to the discovery of the seventh and eighth grade drug ring started March 11 when an 11-year-old girl was taken to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael for treatment of an overdose of phenobarbital.

The girl recovered after having her stomach pumped but was drowsy for two days, according to Mrs. Prandi. From the youngster, officers and school officials learned that she had taken 16 pills which were presented to her as "downers."

The phenobarbital, a depressant used to induce sleep, had been stolen by a 13-year-old girl from a home where she was babysitting. Residents of the home were unaware their pills were missing until notified by officers, Mrs. Prandi said.

The girl took the pills to

Horse Lover Loses Battle; Judge Orders Steed To Go

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court has given Edward K. Wachsman, former Marin County planning commissioner, a choice between getting rid of the horse he keeps at his San Rafael home or going to jail for 30 days.

Wachsman has been given until April 2 to make up his mind.

Judge Smith, who convicted Wachsman last year of having the animal without a permit, last month vacated his earlier order of placing Wachsman on one year probation, fining him $50 and ordering him to get rid of the horse.

He referred Wachsman in February to the probation department for a report.

The judge had first sentenced Wachsman after finding him guilty of the misdemeanor last June but stayed the execution of the sentence while the case was unsuccessfully appealed. When he learned that Wachsman still had the horse in Feburary, the annoyed judge took the new action.

Thursday he also turned down a motion by City Atty. David Menary that the case be continued for two months. He said, however, that if Wachsman had a permit for the horse by April 2, he will take that into consideration.

Wachsman's horse has been a bone of contention with his Dominican area neighbors for over a year.

Nixon Warns Arabs, May Turn Down Israel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon warned today that if Soviet arms shipments to the United Arab Republic changed the military balance in the Middle East the United States "would take action" to assure Israel's security.

The President, in an impromptu White House news conference, strongly indicated however that Secretary of State William P. Rogers will announce on Monday that the administration has decided for the moment not to grant Israel's request for 50 more Phantom jet fighter bombers.

Palm Sunday Rites Begin Week Of Services Throughout Marin

"And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way." (St. Matthew, Chapter 21, Verse 8.)

It is the first official day of Holy Week which will be climaxed next week with the death on the cross and the resurrection next Sunday — Easter Day.

Also the same Lenten cantata will be presented at 3 p.m. at the First Methodist Church of San Rafael at 3 p.m.

Rent-Raising Landlord Blames Children, Dogs

The owner of a Tiburon apartment house said frankly today he was raising the rent for some tenants in order to drive them from the building because their children have caused thousands of dollars worth of damage.

Charles Schonfeld of Hillsborough told the Independent-Journal, "We've had a lot of complaints from other tenants, saying they will move out if nothing is done" about the children.

Two tenants, Clinton L. Mosher and Edward J. Navarro, of the Tiburon View Apartments at 4 Circle Drive, complained Thursday to the Marin County Human Rights Commission that their rent had been raised from $185 to $275 a month.

They told the commission the landlord wants to oust all children under 21. Schonfeld denied that, however. He said rent has been raised on about 10 of the 129 apartments where damage-causing children had been identified.

"We have no objection to children. We have children in 40 to 50 units, but the children in those (ten) units . . they've been doing damage there."

Schonfeld said the children have damaged the grounds, the apartments, the elevators and plantings. "They've allowed dogs to make noise disturbing other tenants, they keep them in when they should go out, and allowed them to go in paths where people walk. They've ruined quite a few of the carpets in the building."

"You have no choice," he said. "Either you get rid of the kids who misbehave, or you lose your other tenants."

Schonfeld said his firm, Continental Lodge, raised the rents because "eviction is a much longer process. We've found this the easier way. . .it's much easier to have them leave by boosting their rent than by taking them to court."

If the rent hike fails, "then we'll raise the rent again. We don't expect them to pay the new rent, we expect them to move."

In Foster City apartments the company owns, Schonfeld said, three-fourths of the families have children. "And we're still taking rentals there with children but we're screening the children. When the parents come, we get a promise that if the children cause any damage they'll have to leave.

"Over in Tiburon, both parents are working. . .there's no one to take care of the children. . .If we take children now, we expect at least one parent to be home at all times to guide them, which is the normal way a family should be run."

Schonfeld said Mosher was trying to stir up trouble and had "threatened he was in a position he could damage us because of publicity." Mosher is a publicist and former political editor of the San Francisco Examiner.

"When they cost us thousands and thousands of dollars, then I believe we have a right to evict these families," Schonfeld said.

He said the firm has recently spent $40,000 in fixing up the Tiburon aparments. "We're trying to keep the property up in like-new condition. . .so people will have something they'll be proud to live in."

Trapped Robbery Suspect Shoots Self Before Crowd

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — A 22-year-old robbery suspect, vowing he would not be taken alive, fired a bullet into his head while police and about 100 other people—including his wife—looked on.

Danny Joe DeSmith was reported in critical condition after undergoing surgery at Fairview General Hospital Friday.

The shooting ended a standoff that lasted nearly two hours, with armed police standing guard at the West Side home where DeSmith had taken refuge after allegedly being involved in a men's store holdup.

Kenneth Friedlander, 29, whose father owns the store, was shot and critically wounded during the holdup.

Police said DeSmith and a companion tried to rob the store but were thwarted when Friedlander resisted. They fled in a station wagon. Thomas M. Ring, 19, was captured after a police chase.

DeSmith ran to the porch of a house on West 130th Street and held the gun to his head, threatening to shoot himself if police tried to take him.

More than 30 policemen at the scene covered DeSmith with pistols and shotguns while several officers walked close to the porch and tried to talk him into surrendering.

TV Newsmen Claim Orders To Grind News Firm's Axes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Two members of the KRON-TV news staff have testified that their superiors told them they were given news assignments in order to advance the station's interest in cable television franchises.

The two men testified Friday before an examiner for the Federal Communications Commission, who is conducting a hearing to determine whether KRON-TV's broadcast license should be renewed.

Don Picken testified that he was instructed to cover the dedication of a new library in South San Francisco on Feb. 19, 1967.

Picken, a KRON-TV reporter at that time and now news director for a Honolulu television station, characterized the story as "falling within the broad framework of what we in the newsroom call a Mickey Mouse story" or one of "no great weight."

Picken further testified that there was "a considerable flap" at the station when film taken at the event was damaged in processing.

Picken said assignment editor Evan White told him that coverage of the story was ordered because "the company" had an application for cable TV in South San Francisco.

The FCC hearing was called following charges that KRON-TV slanted news stories for the benefit of the Chronicle Publishing Co., which owns the Chronicle Broadcasting Co. Chronicle Publishing also has cable TV interests on the Peninsula and in the East Bay.

Terry J. Morrison, a KRON-TV cameraman who has been covering the FCC hearings, was called to the witness stand by FCC attorney Charles Kelley to testify about coverage of the Chicken's Ball in San Carlos in February, 1968.

Morrison said that two cameras were used on the assignment and a total of 3,600 feet of color film was shot, enough to run for 100 minutes.

Morrison said he was surprised at the extent of the coverage and asked news director Mel Kampmann to explain.

"He told me this station was interested in a CATV license in that area," Morrison said.

Morrison also testified that he was "distressed" because KRON-TV did not cover the 1965 joint operating agreement between the Chronicle and the Examiner until a formal announcement was made by the two papers.

Picken was asked to identify two memorandums in the policy and procedures book used in the KRON-TV newsroom.

One, from Chronicle Broadcasting Co. president Harold P. See, said that all stories relating to the public relations image of any radio or TV station in the U.S. must be brought to the attention of See or the station manager.

The memorandum said the same policy also applied to stories involving the Chronicle Publishing Co.

Regents Back Reagan On Campus Discipline

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The governor's newest proposals to curb and punish lawbreaking student demonstrators — modified somewhat after several campus administrators objected — have been approved by the University of California Board of Regents.

The key changes in present regulations governing the nine-campus system are granting chancellors' authority to declare a state of emergency if disruptions occur within one mile of their schools and requiring them to suspend involved student, faculty and staff members.

Chancellors already had the power to utilize emergency tools if disturbances occurred on campus. But it had not previously been mandatory actually to use suspension powers if an emergency situation developed.

Regents adopted Gov. Reagan's recommendations in a voice vote during their monthly meeting Friday in Los Angeles.

In a letter to regents earlier in the week, Reagan proposed that chancellors be required to call a state of emergency when trouble threatens.

University President Charles Hitch and chancellors on the Los Angeles, Riverside and Santa Barbara campuses objected to that provision, preferring the discretionary policy approved by the board.

"We can live with it now and it's reasonable," UCLA Chancellor Charles Young told regents.

'WORTH TRYING'

Hitch said campus officers have enough authority to discipline violators and quell disturbances but he said of the stiffer new rules, "I think this is worth trying."

Disruption is defined in the policies as seizing control of buildings, preventing or attempting to break up authorized assemblies and stopping lawful meetings by force or threat.

Interim suspensions must be imposed immediately by the chancellor where there is reasonable cause to believe regulations are violated in disturbances.

The action, approved by 18 of 20 regents present, follows recent demonstrations and violent outbreaks both on and near the Santa Barbara campus.

Reagan said the regents had not taken positive action in the past to quash trouble. "Whether right or wrong," he told them, "at least it is an effort to protect the civil rights of a majority of the students and a majority of the faculty."

Regent William Coblentz, who opposed the proposals with Regent William Forbes, labeled some of the governor's statements "a blanket denouncement of the chancellors."

Bill James, 28-year-old student body president at Santa Barbara, said "this forces people underground to use guerrilla-type tactics. You can't even demonstrate non-violently."

MORE OFTEN

Hitch said the main effect of the regulations will be that campus emergencies will be called more often. He told newsmen the policies should curb violence.

Reagan requested that regents be furnished a detailed report on the number of disturbances in the last two years in the university system, how many persons were arrested and disciplined and what punishment was handed out.

Integration Guidelines Session Set

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A committee created by the state Board of Education to draft new integration guidelines for local schools will hold its first public meeting Wednesday night in Los Angeles.

Board President Howard Day Friday announced formation of the committee and said it would present the new guidelines to the board at its May meeting.

The board last week scrapped a set of advisory guidelines at the request of Day and Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty.

Rafferty said dropping the guidelines would help the Los Angeles City School District's appeal of a Superior Court order directing integration by Sept. 1971.

Day said the committee would be headed by Dr. John Ford, a member of the board. Other representatives of the board on the special panel will be Day himself and Tony Sierra.

The president said the rest of the committee members would be: Jerry Fine, California School Boards Association; George M. Downing, California Superintendents Association; Mrs. Ken Kozasa, California Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Bettye Smith, California Teachers Association; Jerry F. Halverson, Los Angeles City Schools; Paul B. Salmon, Sacramento City Schools; M. William L. Cobb, San Francisco City Schools; and M. Ted Dixon, County San Francisco City Schools; and M. Four Months: Indians Still Hold Alcatraz

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The tiny band of Indians who have occupied Alcatraz Island for four months plans to stay indefinitely.

The U.S. government apparently is willing to let them do so.

Since the Indians slipped ashore on the abandoned prison island in the middle of San Francisco Bay under cover of darkness last Nov. 20, they have survived there, started schools and shops, and formed a government.

As the fourth month anniversary passed Friday, the government still showed little inclination to force the approximately 100 Indians off the island.

Thomas J. Hannon, regional director of the General Services Administration, has repeatedly told the Indians that they are "trespassers."

NO OUSTER TRY

But no effort was made to enforce the law as Hannon sees it. The government apparently hoped the Indians would eventually go away on their own.

If a federal force were to move against the Indians, protests from sympathizers undoubtedly would be heard from all over the world. But if the government gives the Indians the island, officials fear this will inspire similar demonstrations elsewhere.

Just two weeks ago 100 Indians and actress Jane Fonda were expelled from Ft. Lawton, Wash. Last weekend a small group tried to land on Ellis Island in New York.

Hannon says he has always felt the Alcatraz Indians have behaved in an orderly and peaceful manner, causing no great harm on the former prison site, abandoned in 1963.

"I just saw no compelling reason to force me to take them off the island."

A SYMBOL

Peter Blue Cloud, a Mohawk steel worker and one of the Indians' leaders, symbolizes the Indians' will to remain. He says "we have shown Indians around the country and even in Latin America what can be done."

The Indians want the island for construction of an educational and cultural center. Their claim is based on an old treaty which they say gives them a right to unused federal property.

A resolution is pending in Congress urging serious consideration to giving the Indians the island and a similar resolution has passed the California Assembly.

Indian Youth Defends Hair Vs. School

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge has allowed an Indian student to continue in school with long hair at least until March 30.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Peckham issued a temporary restraining order Friday against Analy Union High School in Sebastopol where school authorities told Gordon James, a 17-year-old Kashi Pomo Indian, he must get a haircut to return to class.

Judge Peckham set March 30 for a hearing on James' suit, which said long hair was "a vital part of my Indian heritage."

"I am proud to be an Indian, and cutting my hair seems to mean I'm ashamed to be an Indian, and I'm not," said James. His suit was filed jointly with California Indian Legal Services.

John McGrew, school superintendent, said "if we gave him special dispensation, it would be reverse discrimination against all other students."

His suit claims that regulations requiring hair cut an inch above the collar violates the 1st and 14th amendments protecting freedom of expression and religion.

LSD Charge To Superior Court

Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, yesterday was bound over to Marin Superior Court on a charge of selling LSD last year. He is to be arraigned Thursday.

The younger brother is awaiting trial on a charge of selling marijuana.

Russ Set Tests

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union announced Friday a new series of test rocket firings in the northern Pacific between Alaska and Siberia.

It asked other governments to warn ships and aircraft to keep their distance from the 55-square-mile target area centered on 35 degrees, 43 minutes north latitude and 172 degrees 38 minutes west longitude.

The tests began Friday and will continue until April 10, the announcement said.

French Traffic Rolls

PARIS (AP) — The French capital's biggest traffic jam in living memory eased today as protesting truck drivers ended their protest blockade of the main highways leading into the city.

Britain's Foreign Office indicated this week it may veto the sale, since the tanks are equipped with 105 mm British cannon.

Strikers Fired

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The city of Atlanta began hiring replacements today for about 1,400 fired workers. Despite calls by union officials for a "siege" of the city in retaliation for the firings, no incidents had been reported.

Mayor Sam Massell ordered the dismissals late Friday, after a five-hour meeting with union officials and others failed to bring an agreement to end a four-day strike.

Spy Planes Lost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has acknowledged the loss over the past four years of nine 2,000-mile-per-hour SR71 spy planes in crashes that also claimed the lives of three pilots.

The Air Force declined to say how many of the Lockheed-built craft remain, but there is only one SR71 unit, the 9th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing with two squadrons located at Beale AFB, Calif. Such squadrons normally have about 15 planes.

Arson Probed

SEATTLE (AP) — Fire officials pointed an intense investigation toward arson today as they probed the cause of an explosive blaze that ripped through a 60-year-old Seattle hotel, killing 20 persons and injuring 15 others.

Fire Marshal Stephen MacPherson said: "We are talking with anyone who has any knowledge whatsoever of the fire—all the survivors, witnesses, anybody."

He said a recent disturbance, possibly involving threats, at the 62-room hotel was being checked out.

New Dubcek Woes

PRAGUE, (AP)—The Czechoslovak Communist party has suspended the party membership of its popular 1968 leader, Alexander Dubcek, and expelled from party ranks Dubcek's former top aide Josef Smrkovsky, it was disclosed officially today.

The Communist party membership of Dubcek, now Czechoslovak ambassador to Turkey, has been suspended "pending completion of a party investigation," into his conduct as first secretary in 1968 and 1969, party Presidium member Vasil Bilak reported.

Russ Given Nod

SINGAPORE (AP) — Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman gave tacit approval today to Soviet naval patrols of the high seas in the Indian ocean.

CALCUTTA, India, (AP)—Police reported today they had arrested 200 persons and seized more than 200 bombs in the past two days in raids throughout Calcutta.

New Rulers Of Cambodia Sworn In

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodia's new ruling triumvirate appeared before the National Assembly Saturday, and one member declared the government will "safeguard our independence within our present borders."

The occasion was the swearing in of Cheng Chen, president of the National Assembly, who took over as chief of state when Parliament by unanimous vote ousted Prince Norodum Shihanouk Wednesday while he was in Paris.

Flanking Cheng were the two real powers behind this revolution— Premier Gen. Lon Nol, who also is defense minister, and Deputy Premier Sisowath Sirik Matak.

In a speech reported by Radio Phnom Penh, Lon Nol demanded that other nations observe international law. This was an obvious reference to the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces who use Cambodian border provinces as sanctuaries for the war in Vietnam.

"Only in this way will our friendship with our nations last and expand."

Postmen Still Defiant; Nixon Hints At Action

stations, workers took strike votes on the job.

At Rincon Annex, the major downtown processing point, only four trucks driven by supervisory personnel moved out in the shift's first two hours. Usually 100 trucks would have departed.

Picketing also occurred at San Francisco International Airport through which transcontinental and overseas mail passes.

The president issued a special statement on the postal strike saying that if the unauthorized work stoppages continue they would "seriously jeopardize the national public interest.

"There are legitimate grievances that have been brought to the fore in the current postal crisis. But those grievances cannot and will not be negotiated or ameliorated in a climate of intimidation."

Nixon said he wanted to give responsible union leadership a chance to work out a settlement with the postmaster general and that — dispite Friday's failure—he still believed there was a chance for such talks.

NEW YORK VOTE

The 6,700-men New York local of the National Association of Letter Carriers voted overwhelmingly Saturday morningby a shouted vonce vote to continue the illegal strike which it began Wednesday to enforce demands for "a living wage."

Boisterous union members waved signs characterizing national union leaders who reached a shaky back-to-work agreement with the Department of Labor Friday as "rats" and "creeps".

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said in Washington that Nixon should step into the situation personaliy if the strike continues.

"Circumstances could develop which would almost make it a necessity," he said, adding that he personally is against special legislation to force the mailmen back to work although it may also become a necessity.

"We'll forego our Easter recess if we have to," he said.

The action of the New York mass meeting followed similar decisions to strike or remain on strike by postal workers in Chicago—the nation's central mail distrubution point — Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Denver, Minneapolis, Boston and Los Angeles suburbs. The mailmen made it clear they would not go back to work until they get a concrete wage hike offer from the Nixon administration.

James H. Radamacher, president of the letter carriers' union, and heads of six other postal unions had reached agreement with Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz Friday whereby they would ask the strikers to return to work while negotiations were held. The union said if no agreement was reached by next Friday it would call a nationwide strike, which is forbidden by federal law.

Strikers in Kansas City and Detroit at first agreed to go back to their jobs but the movement to resume mail service collapsed when votes to remain on strike were taken in other cities. Henry Zych, president of the Chicago local, told fist-shaking mailmen at the meeting Friday night he would lead them out on strike "because you are morally right."

Chicago Postmaster Henry McGee said he may have to order an embargo on mail coming into Chicago Monday. This would be a near-mortal blow to the U.S. postal system which already has had to embargo New Jersey, Connecticut, major portions of New York, Michigan and Wisconsin, and Philadelphia, St. Paul, Minn., and Akron Ohio.

The strike also spread to localities in Colorado, Nevada, Illinois, Texas and Massachusetts. A strike vote was scheduled for the Boston postal district Sunday. In New York, members of the 26,000-man Manhattan and Bronx Post Union, which is already honoring the carriers' picket lines, voted all day Saturday, and Los Angeles and San Francisco mailmen voted Saturday.

Even if the strike ended immediately, embargoes could be lifted only on first class mail and air mail, according to New York Postmaster John Strachan. It would take three or four days to lift embargoes on other types of mail and maybe a week or 10 days to resume normal service, he said.

Tiburon May Bar Autos From Square

The Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission, in a review of the Buskirk-Noble plan for downtown development, has objected to the intrusion of cars in the town square and ferry slip areas.

Asst. City Mgr. Robert Kleinert said the commission approved a motion Thursday night expressing its concern to the city council, which is expected to schedule hearings on the plan Monday night.

The development scheme was approved Wednesday night by the city planning commission.

Kleinert said the commission, while in general accord with the plan, believed the town square should be restricted to pedestrian use and that vehicles should not be permitted near the ferry dock in the downtown region.

The Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission also:

HILARITA — Endorsed the park cocept of development of the Hilarita property.

PELICAN — Asked the city council to endorse the Reed School District board's request for $850 in matching county funds to develop the Pelican Hall pathway used by Bel Aire School students.

PATHWAYS — Approved a title search of pedestrian pathways in the city.

BENCH — Said it would look for sites to place pedestrian benches.

MEEETINGS—Adjourned to 8 p.m. Thursday in city hall and said it would change next month's regular meeting from April 2 to April 9 because of a council candidates' night.

school and sold them two for 25 cents or nine for $1, according to Mrs. Prandi. When she had earned $10, she gave the rest of the pills away and used her profits to buy a lid of marijuana, according to the officer.

Further investigation led to the citing of two other Miller Creek girls who had either sold or distributed pills or marijuana. Mrs. Prandi said that the girls had been peddling drugs at the school, at the Marinwood Recreation Center and in the creek area behind the center.

She added that cooperation by concerned parents had aided in the investigation and gave a warning that people who hire youngsters to babysit keep their pills out of their reach.

"This is the second case I've had where legitimate prescriptions were stolen by babysitters," Mrs. Prandi said.

All the youngsters involved in using or furnishing the drugs have been suspended from school for 10 days.

Middle School Cuts On Agenda

The Mill Valley School District board will renew discussion of cuts in the proposed 1,200-student middle school when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at Park School auditorium.

The board has held up a decision on the reductions, which would save $1 million, pending a report from architects on whether portables could be used for drama and music facilities scheduled for construction at the school.

The board also is scheduled to hear reports on multiethnic studies and on the financial condition of the district.

Employees Plan To Compare Pay For Hub Board

The San Anselmo School Employees Association will present wage comparisons with other school districts in the county to justify a cost-of-living increase when it meets with the negotiating committee of the San Anselmo School District board in April.

President Rosemary Gicker said the association at its meeting Thursday directed its salary committee to discuss the increase and several other issues with the trustee representatives. Mrs. Gicker said the size of the increase to be sought has not been determined.

The other issues include the establishment of an employer-employee relations committee, employee longevity and the setting aside of a percentage of the budget for salaries of classified employees.

Mrs. Gicker said the salary committee will meet sometime in middle or late April with trustees Franklin C. Latcham and Vasil H. Scalabrini.

Bruce said that Zucker's position as candidate and county planning director "denies due process to planning applicants and sets back the entire process of planning. . .his position in particular requires close rapport with the board of supervisors and the making of recommendations on which the board relies—recommendations based on independent professional judgment uninfluenced by external or personal factors."

Zucker will counter Tuesday with a request for a leave of absence without pay beginning March 30.

Letters On Interracial Dating With Wide And Varying Response

DEAR READERS:

When I asked for comments on interracial dating, I expected a large and widely varying response — and got it. Here is my first column of letters on a subject which has only recently been allowed public discussion:

DEAR HELEN:

I am a 19-year-old college sophomore. I attended semi-private all-girl Catholic schools before entering a university where I have met all types, classes, races. Until then, I did not know if I was prejudiced or not. In my snug little world, the question never came up.

One of the real friends I have made here is a black male student. He has taught me a great deal about his race—and my own. At first I was totally optimistic about an interracial society. I used all the cliches now in vogue with the pseudo-liberals. Then I realized I was acting like typical Whitey—the dumb Whitey who thinks wishing will make it so. But it's not so. I was looking at it from a white point of view.

As I got to know my black friend better, I saw the intense dislike blacks have for these dumb Whities and I know why. There is a massive transition taking place among the black race today; a beautiful change because it is based on an intangible but mountain-moving force: pride, which is uniting a race that has suffered persecution for 300 years.

I now realize that one obstacle in the path of interracial dating is the black point of view—a view never before considered. When black becomes beautiful, why should it be lightened? Perhaps the blacks see no need for wide scale interracial mixing.

My point is that too many of the college crowd are pushing interracial dating because it is fashionable. If there is a real love relationship, then color doesn't matter, but I don't think most whites are ready to accept full and complete relationships with the black race. I think we must straighten out our thinking a lot more before we'll be ready for an interracial society. I truly envy the proud blacks; if only there were more proud whites.

—AWAKENED

DEAR HELEN:

I feel qualified to discuss interracial dating, as I am a white girl who has dated a Negro boy. The idea should not be taken lightly.

The two involved should be mature enough to hold their heads up high, even though there is talk. The relationship need not be love, they shouldn't be playing a game, or trying to prove something, or handing friends and parents a lesson on true integration. If either partner uses the other as a stepping stone or an object lesson or to show rebellion, they're both in for big trouble, for they'll be used and soon hated.

I see nothing wrong with interracial dating if you consider each other as individuals not white and non-white. But it can hurt people you love—parents who just aren't ready for this big step yet. I hope one day we can all mingle as one race, but it will be a while yet — AN AFFIRMATIVE VOTE

DEAR HELEN:

I remember the time when interracial dating meant "Caucasian-Oriental" and how the parents screamed when servicemen brought back their far-Eastern brides. The German war bride fared little better. We've come a long way since then.

—OBSERVER

DEAR HELEN:

White girls date men of other races, but very few Negro girls date Caucasian fellows — unless those women have achieved fame and acclaim, and they aren't very dark. Is it that men are more prejudiced than women? —DIRK

DEAR HELEN: I am a black teen-age girl and furiously opposed to interracial dating.

My reasons:

On campus, black girls are rejected by black males, who use such flimsy excuses as black girls are too domineering, have too high moral standards, etc., whereas they "can get anything from a white girl" — even the financing of the date and the motel room.

The "superior race" implies our morals are low. They should look to themselves.

Interracial dating can lead to marriage, and rejection by both races. Children may never know their grandparents. Most people aren't strong enough to go it alone. I prefer living in the world side by side, not together.

All Consumer Wants From Industry Is Information

By BETH GAEDDERT

Information. That's all the consumer is asking of industry.

Betty Furness, who spent 11 years opening refrigerator doors for television commercials and now campaigns to get manufacturers to tell how much electricity it costs to run them; urged several hundred consumers in San Anselmo yesterday not to buy products they can't get information on.

She praised one automatic washing machine manaufacturer who recently started putting a "telltag" on the product stating how much water, electricity, etc. each of the models require.

"It can be a competitive thing for manufacturers to give buyers information on their products. The only thing the tag doesn't answer is how long it will last. It's hard for me to believe they don't know," she told the women attending the A.M. lecture.

Betty Furness was appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson to the post he created, Special Presidential Assistant for Consumer Affairs. The audience chuckled as she read newspaper clippings on her appointment. She is now, she said, a "special assistant to consumers," and is a member of Advisory Council to the Senate Subcommittee in Consumer Affairs.

When a product is faulty, she said, "You must complain. A personal boycott of a product will do no good unless the company knows about it."

First go to the store and try to get your money's worth from the manager. If he won't help you write to the company's president (whom you can find listed in Poor's Directory of Corporation Presidents and Executives at the library.) And work through the Association of California Consumers, she said.

"You are lucky to have an effective voluntary consumers group," she said pointing out that Gov. Ronald Reagan cut down the state consumer counsel's office to one woman and a secretary. The post had been a very effective one held by Helen Nelson, formerly of Mill Valley, but now Kay Valory, who holds the post of Consumer Counsel, has said she will refuse to testify on behalf of the consumer when a bill requiring unit pricing of California goods comes up soon, she said.

Unit pricing, means that manufacturers would state how much per pound or ounce the product would cost.

For example, by the time a housewife figures out which size Coca-Cola is cheapest and then compares it with all the other brands of soft drinks, "her children have all grown up and gone away to college and she hasn't even said good-bye to them," said Miss Furness.

Since the federal consumer post was created, Miss Furness said, some reforms in packaging have come into effect. Where there were once 57 weights of toothpastes there are now only five. And paper towel packages have been reduced from 33 different sizes to eight.

"Green olives are hopeless," she said. "There used to be 50 different kinds of packages now there are 20."

Packages are now required by federal law to tell the weight of the contents and the name and address of the company in readable print.

However, she pointed out, the law applies only to products shipped intra-state, so state laws to protect consumers are sometimes necessary.

As an example she said the recent federal meat inspection law requires hams to have less than 19 per cent water. Since this is not a California law a ham processed and sold within the state could have as much as 30 per cent water.

Speaking often of Ralph Nader, whom she called "a real fellow on a white horse," she said he pointed out that we kill thousands of people on the highways and injure millions more and assume it's all the fault of the nut behind the wheel.

"He pointed out that it may be the nut holding the wheel together.

A close-to-home problem was brought up by a member of the audience who told of being charged by the phone company for toll calls made to a busy number. She discovered this by noting that she was charged for several three-minute calls within a couple of minutes. A company representative told her, and it was confirmed by another one in San Francisco, that this occasionally happens especially when several calls are made consecutively to the same number. The company person said it was a failure in the equipment

"The consumer puts his health, money and safety. Industry puts up money.

"We need information and when that's not enough we need protection," she said.

Junior Petite Sizes May Pressure Pattern Makers

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

I have no suggestions for improving your column, but—my wish is that you could prevail upon the pattern companies to offer more patterns in the junior petite sizes. I know how to alter the regular patterns to fit my daughter as well as myself. However, I have lost some of the enthusiasm I would like to have if there were more pattern selections.

MRS. E.A.O.

DEAR MRS. E.A.O.:

You flatter me; I don't think I could make this suggestion to the pattern companies and have the results you would like. But, every manufacturer is impressed by the requests they receive for any product because then they are sure there is a definite need for it.

I would suggest that all of you who are interested in the junior petite sizing (and from your letters, there are more than I ever would have imagined), stop whatever you are doing and drop me a postcard or a short note and tell me about the pattern needs that you can't find. I, in turn, will be sure the pattern companies get your letters and perhaps together something can be done.

Please, write today; that's the only way I can give you any hope about these patterns. Just mail your card or note to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

MRS. LORETTA Giacoletto, Collinsville, Ill., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"With all the dacron ployester knits that we have been making, I made a beautiful patchwork quilt which is washable and doesn't cost a cent to make. I used the small scraps that were too small for the quilt for the stuffings of throw pillows."

DEAR EUNICE:

I am making my spring suit and have just finished the most beautiful bound buttonholes, thanks to your easy to follow instructions. Guess I should have followed you all the way through. Instead I followed the pattern instructions and made my buttonholes through the interfacing. Now, the front of my jacket seems to be pulled out of shape and the right side is shorter than the left side. Is there anything I can do with it now?

MRS. J.M.

DEAR MRS. J.M.:

Wish you would have done what I advised; it could have saved lots of extra work and been much more satisfactory. When you prepare your fabric for the buttonholes, baste your guide lines through your fabric only. Then place a three-inch wide strip of organdy on the wrong side of your garment. The buttonholes are made through the organdy and your fabric.

After they have been turned, and pressed, you may cut the organdy away from each buttonhole. Be sure to cut close to the buttonhole so that the edges won't curl up. Now, place your interfacing over the completed buttonholes and baste in position. Next, cut a rectangle a slight bit larger than the buttonholes out of your interfacing, pull the welts through to the wrong side and you'll never have another problem like yours.

As to a solution to your problem, you will have to cut the interfacing away from around the buttonholes to release the pulling.

If you want my free instruction sheet on "Bound Buttonholes" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR EUNICE:

Help — for the handicapped, pattern-wise. Why aren't the robes and housecoat patterns shown with both a center front or a center back zipper? I can't manage a back zipper, and everything I seem to like has this type closing.

MRS. R.R.T.

DEAR MRS. R.R.T.:

You really don't have as much of a problem as you imagine. Almost any pattern can be adjusted for either a center front or center back closing quite easily, no matter how your pattern shows it.

If you wish to add a center front zipper when the pattern has been cut with the center front on a fold, simply place your pattern back at least ⅝ inches for the seam allowance necessary for the zipper closing. If you do this, you may wish to place the seamline itself for the center back on the fold of your fabric and ediminate a seam altogether. The same technique can be used for anyone who wishes to use a back closing and the pattern would call for a front closing.

Mill Valleyan Visits At Navajo College In Arizona

By MOLLY MARIN

Barbara Binckley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Binckley of Mill Valley, spent two weeks with the Bruce Colemans and their sons Stephen and Joey at Many Farms, Ariz., where she had some interesting experiences.

The Binckleys drove down to pick her up and were interested to learn about the work the Colemans, whose permanent address is Mill Valley, are doing with the Navajo Indians.

Coleman, formerly a reporter for the Independent-Journal, is teaching English at the Navajo Community College at Many Farms, near Chinle, which is the first college established on the Navajo reservation. His wife, Jean, is teaching third grade at Chinle, and Barbara,a college of Marin student last semester, helped her teach lip reading to some of the Indian children who have hearing problems.

Wide Range Of Adult Classes Available In Marin Schools

Classes ranging from basic elementary education to technical analysis approach to investments, numbering 110, will be offered this spring for Marin residents in adult education classes throughout the county.

There will be classes for those seeking a high school diploma as well as those seeking advanced degrees and classes to train students for a vocation as well as classes for those seeking cultural improvement.

College of Marin's community educational adult classes will start day and evening programs on the Kentfield campus and at other county locations the week of March 30th. Information and a brochure concerning the more than 100 adult classes, as well as the free concert-lecture series, may be secured by phoning the College of Marin registrar's office, where pre-registration will also be taken.

Sonoma State College also provides continuing education opportunities for adults in a six-county service area which includes Marin County. Credit and noncredit extension courses, workshops, seminars, institutes and conferences are offered during the year with an extensive summer session program. Further information regarding these programs can be obtained from Dr. Carroll Mjelde, Dean Educational Services and Summer Sessions, 1108 Stevenson Hall, Sonoma State College, 1801 E. Cotati Avenue, Rohnert Park, Calif. 94928.

Novato Unified, San Rafael and Tamalpais High School districts plan comprehensive programs, while Golden Gate College offers continuing resident credit classes at Hamilton Air Force Base leading to the bachelor's degree in business administration. The University of Southern California also conducts a master's degree program in Aerospace operations management at Hamilton Air Force Base which may be completed through the on-base program. All classes are open to military and civilian personnel. Further information may be had from Daniel Spelling, education officer at Hamilton.

The Novato district will offer evening classes at various district schools. The spring term opens during the week of March 30 and closes June 5. Adults 18 years of age and over not enrolled in the day program may enroll for evening classes.

Registration information can be obtained from Robert McKay, principal of the Novato Evening Adult School, at the district office, 1015 Seventh Street, Novato.

San Rafael Adult School will open its spring program during the week of March 30 with most classes to be held at Terra Linda and San Rafael High Schools.

Registration for noncredit classes will be taken in class rooms during the first two class sessions. A single registration fee allows a student to take as many courses as he chooses. No fee will be charged for students under 21, persons enrolled in the high school diploma program, persons receiving Social Security, persons receiving public assistance through the department of social services and persons referred by the Department of Human Resources Development (California State Department of Employment).

The spring term brochure is available now at stores, schools, banks and libraries, reported Floyd L. Peterson, adult school director.

Further information can be obtained at the Adult School Office, Administration Building, 3rd and E streets, San Rafael.

The Tamalpais High School District will conduct classes at three high schools in the district: Tamalpais, Sir Francis Drake and Redwood, starting March 30. Classes are scheduled to be held Mondays and Wednesdays at Redwood and Tamalpais and on Tuesdays and Thursdays at Drake.

Further information can be obtained from Nicholas J. Gennaro, dean of adult education, Redwood High School; Evelyn W. Leedy, dean of adult education, Drake High; and James Hanretty, dean of adult education, Tamalpais High.

The following list of courses offered throughout Marin County is published for individuals to save for reference, or pass along to friends and neighbors who might be interested. This is a joint effort of the Marin-Sonoma Adult Educators Association, according to Floyd Peterson, secretary, so that hundreds throughout the area may take advantage of an opportunity to continue their education.

Marijuana, Driving Charges Are Denied

James Alfred Watson, 23, of Woodacre, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing marijuana and reckless driving in San Anselmo March 13.

A preliminary hearing was set for April 14.

OIL FIGHT IN WILDLIFE HAVEN

A Chevron Oil Co. helicopter drops baled hay trying to blot up oil slicks along the shore of a wildlife haven at Breton Island, La. But 35 miles-per-hour winds today prevented workmen from shutting off a spewing Gulf of Mexico oil well that has been on the rampage for 11 days, since a drilling platform fire was blasted out.

Art Collecting Tycoon Runs Against Murphy

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Norton Simon, a millionaire industrialist and art collector, ducked in under the 5 p.m. filing deadline Friday to become the only major Republican to challenge Sen. George Murphy in the June 2 primary.

Considered a moderate, Simon's entry into the race apparently ended a search by GOP liberals and moderates for a candidate to oppose the conservative Murphy, who is seeking his second term in the U.S. Senate.

At one time during the apparent search, there was a reported move to get Robert Finch, Secretary of Health, Edcuation and Welfare, to oppose Murphy, but the former California lieutenant governor remained in Washington throughout the week. Murphy, 67, has come under controversy since he disclosed last week he has been paid $20,000 a year since his election in 1964 by Technicolor Inc., of Hollywood, used the firm's credit card for travel expenses and half had half his Washington apartment rent paid by the firm —all for work as a consultant.

Simon, 63, a member of the University of California Board of Regents, told newsmen during a recess in the regents' meeting, "I never thought of entering the campaign before this morning...at 8:15." Simon said he was first contacted by a young attorney less than nine hours before the filing deadline. After agreeing to enter the race, aides got the necessary papers together, acquired the needed 65 Republican signatures and filed them here and in Orange County-60 minutes prior to the deadline.

Simon parlayed a tomato packing plant into an industrial empire, now represented by Norton Simon Inc., which was formed in 1968 through the consolidation of Hunt Foods and Industries Inc., Canada Dry Corp., and the McCall Corp.

The Pacific Ocean covers an area larger than that of all the continents combined.

No Charge Yet Filed In Highway Crash

No charge was filed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against Joseph Dubois Elsberry, 48, of Novato, who was arrested Thursday night on suspicion of felony drunken driving after an accident on Highway 101 near Novato.

The case was to be investigated further by the district attorney's office.

TEACHING ENTERPRISE

Marinite Hoping For Incentive Education

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

The progress of Assembly Bill 272, which has cleared the California Assembly Education Committee and is set for hearing by the Ways and Means Committee on March 31, is of more than casual interest to Clyde R. Brown of Belvedere.

The bill, by Assemblymen Jesse M. Unruh, D-Los Angeles; Kenneth Corry, D-Anaheim, and Leroy F. Greene, D-Sacramento, would permit school districts to contract with outside agencies for special instruction programs on a "guaranteed improvement" basis.

Brown is an education entrepreneur who contracts special instruction programs with private schools on such a basis. He would like to get into the public schools.

Such entrepreneurs are new on the U. S. education scene, but their number is growing. Brown probably is typical.

As owner and director of Brown Reading Systems, he has contracted rapid reading instruction programs for personnel of such organizations as Bank of America, the Marin County Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and the Arizona State Compensation Fund.

He has also contracted reading improvement programs for Marin Catholic High School and San Rafael Military Academy in Marin County, as well as for Lick-Wilmerding School in San Francisco, St. Helen's Hall in Portland, Ore., and others. And he has conducted workshops in computer-assisted instruction, listening skills, and other new education ideas, one of which is going on at Marin Country Day School in Tiburon.

At University High School in San Diego, Brown contracted a reading course on the "guaranteed improvement" basis which is incorporated in AB 272.

It works like this: A "performance guarantee contract" is entered into between the school district and the private contractor. The latter is reimbursed an amount based on the measurable achievement of students enrolled in the special program. If they fail to achieve promised improvement, he forfeits part of the contract price as penalty; if they exceed it, he receives additional money as "incentive pay." The bill limits such contracts to special programs in reading and mathematics.

Teachers generally frown on the concept of basis pay on the performance of the students, citing dangers of over-pressing for results, etc. But entrepreneurs such as Brown welcome the chance to prove their programs work.

The federal government has funded a few experiemental programs contracted in this manner.

Chicago Seeks Police Aides

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Police Department has opened a recruitment drive for 344 community service aides to work in the Model Cities Neighborhood project.

James B. Conlisk Jr., superintendent, said the aides will work in uniform and receive 200 hours of training before they start their jobs.

They will be an immediate and accessible source to whom area residents can turn to with questions and complaints and to obtain information.

The aides will start at $445 per month salary with raises every three months. In addition, all aides will receive $100 for a uniform allowance each year.

A staff of 57 police officers, headed by a captain, will administer the program.

What Is Featherbedding? Here Is One Example

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary defines featherbed and featherbedding quite plainly:

"A — to require more workmen than are needed,

"B — to limit production under a featherbed rule. . .and "the requiring of an employer, especially under a union rule or safety statute, to pay more employees than are needed; or to limit production."

In 1962, the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara published the results of a rather thorough inquiry into featherbedding in the publishing industry. The inquiry was conducted by Paul Jacobs of the University of California Institute of Industrial Relations.

Jacobs' introduction of the subject will be of special interest to those who ask, "What is the printers' strike against the I-J all about?"

HERE IS HOW Jacobs began his report:

"The composing room of the newspaper is comparatively quiet; no linotype machines chatter harshly, nor does the floor quiver from the running of the presses in the basement. It is the lobster shift — those off-hours when the printers set type without the pressure of a deadline. The men stand at their long composing tables adjusting metal rules, checking type against the copy for the advertisement at their elbow, and occasionally talking with each other.

"The foreman walks over to a hook on the wall, a pike festooned with printed copies of advertisements that appeared in the newspaper days before. He takes one off the hook and carries it to a printer who has just finished tying up the type and metal for an ad that will run in tomorrow's paper.

" 'Here, the foreman tells the printer, offering him the printed ad, 'We're falling behind on reset. Get this one.'

"The printer looks up sullenly. 'What do you think I am —a lousy amateur? I don't want to set that stuff. I'm no blacksmith. Give me some live copy, not that——dead horse.'

"The foreman does not argue. He calmly puts the advertisement down on the table and walks away, saying over his shoulder, 'Get started before I call the chapel chairman over.'

"The printer begins to set the type for an advertisement that had already been run some months earlier. The copy announces an Easter sale in a department store, and it is now the end of summer. Mumbling to himself, the disgruntled printer starts work on the ad, knowing the foreman has authority to demand that the work be done and that the chapel chairman of the shop (the union's chief steward) would back up that authority.

"The compositor slaps together whatever type he can find which fits that of the ad, encloses the type in a metal form, and walks over to a table where he slams it down beside a dozen similar forms of ads that had also appeared earlier in the paper. Soon, another printer will pick up these forms from the table and take them over to a proof press where a proof copy will be made of each one. Then, the proof copy will be checked for errors and the necessary corrections made in the type. Finally, another proof of the ad will be pulled and the printer's work will be ready for its final destiny: to be destroyed without being used — melted down in the 'hell box' where used type becomes hot lead once again.

"This is the process by which printers do 'unwork': work that is actually performed and paid for but goes unused. It is called 'reproduction,' 'reset,' 'bogus,' or 'dead horse.' "

IN THE FOREGOING, Jacobs has vividly described but one of many forms of featherbedding which have infected the publishing industry since the 16th century, when what he describes as the "rigidly controlled . . . tight guild system" evolved as printers banded together in England.

It is difficult to imagine a manufacturing process more strangled with featherbedding practices than is publishing today .

WHO ULTIMATELY PAYS for all this economic waste?

Since the 16th century, it has always been the consumer, of course. He has always paid higher than necessary prices for books, for magazines, for any kind of printed material, including newspapers.

In the case of newspapers, the advertiser has always had to pay more than would otherwise be necessary.

The consumer pays, up to a point, that is. Finally, the price gets too high. He ceases to be a consumer. Advertisers can no longer afford to advertise in sufficient volume. A good many newspapers across the nation — including several in San Francisco not too many years ago—have fallen victim to this chain of events.

Featherbedding has been the root cause of the inefficiency which has led to the demise of so many once strong, vigorous newspapers across the country.

To sum up plainly, the I-J doesn't want that to happen here.

Decline Of The Gulls

Gulls were once thought of as fishermen. They followed schools of small fish and the sight of a flock of gulls told human fishermen where the anchovies, herring and the bigger fish that fed on them were.

But there have always been some gulls that were psychologically disinclined to the nautical life. All that cold water, and so forth! These guys sat around the docks in Sausalito or Tiburon and endeared themselves to the tourists. And there was the gang that saved the Mormons from the grasshopper plague.

Now, there is a population explosion among the gulls of the world, particularly in North America and Europe, which indicates they are feeding off the effluvia of man's affluence. Chicken bones and butter papers are replacing fish remains around gulls' nests. Recent surveys have shown disproportionately large numbers of young birds at dumps, sewer outlets, fish factories and pig farms, rather than at their natural feeding grounds.

But we won't knock them. If they help the recycling of man's refuse, they are performing a valuable service.

"Here's a little trick I picked up from Lyndon Johnson. . . ."

Way To Get More Parks At Same Cost

County Planning Director Paul Zucker, according to articles in the Independent-Journal, apparently feels the various city and county governments in Marin should be melded into one big supergovernment. Would Mr. Zucker also propose one super "all-county" planning department? Would he do away with individual city planning departments and planners? To heck with the charming individuality of our cities? Does Mr. Zucker realize that most Marinites do not wish to be "planned" into one big sterile look-alike "sluburb" under the command of one master planner?. . .

As to preserving parks and open space in Marin County—all Marinites, probably without exception, favor gradual acquisitions. But, with about 25 per cent of the land in Marin almost in public ownership, the overtaxed homeowner may be more than a little hesitant about using more tax dollars for more acquisitions.

However, one way to acquire more parks and open space without spending more tax dollars would be to reduce the county planning department's nearly $500,000. annual "planning" budget to about $250,000. Then the balance of $250,000. could be used to buy more parks without additional expense to the taxpayers. (This would buy a new "McNear's Beach" every two years.). . .

Frankly, it startles me when Mr. Zucker refers to our county, cities, and special districts as "leaderless governments". I run head on into county government often enough and have as much reason as anyone to be critical. However, I respect the men who the voters have elected. The voters have a way of weeding out the men who do not measure up.

County budget hearings are just around the corner. Undoubtedly the board of supervisors (who run Mr. Zucker's "leaderless government") will be taking an exacting look at just what it is we get for our hard-earned tax dollars in county "planning". Perhaps a new system of priorities could give us good planning plus more parks at no extra cost. . .

Get On Welfare To Buy New Car?

I've seen people on welfare driving new cars, have their TVs hooked up to cable TV, and other things. If this is one of the prerequisites to get on welfare, I would like more information on it.

I have been working regularly and I haven't been able to buy a new car, mine is 1964 vintage, and I can't afford cable TV.

Anyone that has any information on this and the procedures to get on welfare, please let me know, as I would like a new car too.

Time To Restore Nation's Foundations

Long ago King David asked this question, "If the foundations be removed, what can the righteous do?" How many of the truly great "foundation stones" of our republic have been removed by the destructive "liberals" in the past forty years?

First — They have taken the Bible from the schoolrooms of our nation, and have given the children a flood of pornographic literature.

Second — They have forbidden prayer in our schools, and turned many thousands of students to marijuana and other narcotic drugs.

Third — They have tried to disarm our law-abiding citizens, leaving our homes without protection, while Black Panthers and other anarchists are armed to the teeth for a communist revolution to take over our country.

Fourth — They have turned loose an army of criminals, who should be in prison, and have made a mockery of the citizens' right to law and order.

The principles upon which our country was founded are being eroded slowly but surely. . .

Let's get prayer and a trust in and reverence for a supreme Being back into our national life. . .

LINES ON LIVING

'Never Quit'—One More Try May Bring Success

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

"Never quit!" is more than a cute slogan of a cheerleader's routine on a sports field. It makes a lot of sense, when we consider that often a destiny is determined by a resolute fight or flight.

I recall the prominent heart surgeon, recounting the harrowing tale of a past night's experience. Sitting across the table, he seemed especially exhausted and drawn, but not withdrawn and unusually talkative. Apparently, he felt the need to unburden his own helpless feeling and sense of frustration. He was suddenly awakened, he began to tell us, at 3 a.m. by an emergency call for open-heart surgery. After breathlessly rushing to the hospital and successfully performing the operation, a pace-maker was installed in the patient's heart to spark him back to life. But, continued the doctor, the man simply didn't want to live. "Why didn't you let me die?" he protested bitterly, pleading: "I don't want to live. I want to be with my son. Let me die." Having finished his sentence, he closed his eyes and . . .died.

PLAINLY, the desperate man refused to live and wanted nothing more than to join his son in death, after hearing on the previous day of his child's fatal injury resulting from his plunging into a car on a speedway, under the influence of drugs. The man, after being rescued from death, simply rejected living by making his choice that life wasn't worth fighting for. He quit and. . .died.

This, of course, is an extreme case of quitting, which is as tragic as it is rare. Nevertheless, some measure of shrinkage can occur in every life if the act of living turns into flight, habit into fright, and destiny into blight.

TO AVOID life's regret, the saddest lament, we must never shrink from savoring life's chalice as being too strong, too intoxicating, too maddening. For "it takes life to love life." And we can do best with the life that's given us, if we keep our soul on fire, our dream to the height of a star and our hands to the faith of a steadfast goal.

This requires a watchful determination and keen alertness. Opportunities seldom present themselves to us on any but short notice. And when the day arrives, when the hour strikes and we are found unprepared and unenthused about the opportunities of the moment, we may neglect the chance of a lifetime.

ONLY WHEN we meet every challenge and chance, every opportunity and break, and we thoughtfully and earnestly probe into their meaning, can we achieve a measure of supreme fulfillment.

Bessie A. Stanley put it most aptly and simply thus: "He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men, the trust of pure women and the love of little children; who has left the world a better place than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has looked for the best in others and given them the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory, a benediction."

COUNTRY PARSON

"Peace of mind can be had only if you are willing to forgive yourself for your failures."

'Solutions' That Do Not Solve Attacked In Forthcoming Book

WASHINGTON — It was the best of times, it was the worst of times. That judgment of Charles Dickens on the period of the French Revolution in his great novel, "A Tale of Two Cities," says something about our revolutionary time.

Man has the knowledge, the skills, the technology to transform the world. The vista of a new life has a radiance that glistens just beyond our grasp. And at the same time we know that with each passing month the gap between the potential of the best of times and the reality of a time of decay and decline grows wider.

The old prescriptions fail, the old tags of "liberal" and "conservative" seem as irrelevant as the incantations of a Bantu medicine man. This is what a distinguished thinker on urban problems is saying in a forthcoming book with a highly explosive charge.

EDWARD C. BANFIELD'S "The Unheavenly City" sets out to puncture the comfortable assumptions that many politicians and commentators live by.

Banfield, a professor of urban government at Harvard, is scornful of what the contemptuous call the knee-jerk liberal reaction. The compulsion to do good, an integral part of the Puritan inheritance, is, he suggests, more likely to be harmful than helpful. His book bristles with brilliant paradox.

"Training programs," he writes, "do not as a rule offer any solution to the problem of hard-core unemployment because the same qualities that make a worker hard-core also make him unable or unwilling to accept training. More generally, giving lower-class persons 'really good' jobs is not a feasible way of inducing them to change their style of life, because that very style of life makes it impossible to give them 'really good' jobs."

BANFIELD HAS his own definition of power and lower class in our supposedly classless society. He says that a person who is poor, unschooled and of low status may be upper class if he is psychologically capable of providing for a distant future. One who is rich and member of the "400" may be lower class if he cannot control his impulses and must, therefore, live from moment to moment.

A general welfare program, Banfield holds, would put an immediate end to poverty but, by causing the breakup of a great many families, by reducing motivation to work and to take some account of the future, and by discouraging migration from areas of poor opportunity to areas of good opportunity, it would in the long run do more harm than good.

Making heroin and other addictive drugs readily available on prescription would reduce violent crime in New York and some other large cities by relieving the addict of the necessity of steeling in order to support his habit. But the effect would also be to increase the number of addicts and the resulting harm would likely be greater than the benefit from the reduction in violent crime.

THE AUTHOR spoofs many of the favorite articles of faith of the liberals and the do-gooders. Thus while he agrees that most American cities are dreary and depressing, if not offensively ugly, he doubts that "beautification" would make much difference in humanizing what he doubts is, in any event, a dehumanized citizenry. So far as their humanity is concerned, he suggests, the people of, say, Jersey City compare very favorably to the Florentines in Florence in the era of its greatest beauty and splendor.

The suspicion will not down that, with the problems of the cities seeming so insoluble, there is a need to rationalize why do they not yield to the long-term efforts lumped under the familiar rhetoric of housing, education, job training, etc., etc.

But, for all that, it is stimulating to have a recognized authority say that the tired old emperor to whom we have so long given allegiance has no clothes.

ART BUCHWALD

Bible Now In Modern Prose, So Why Not Shakespeare, Too?

WASHINGTON—Now that the best minds in the Western World have "improved" the Bible in the most modern edition, which is called "The New English Bible" (the new 23rd Psalm begins, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall want nothing. He makes me lie down in green pastures and leads me beside the waters of peace; He renews life within me and for His name's sake guides me in the right path. . ."), it has been decided to update Shakespeare and make him easier for people to understand.

With this goal in mind and using "The New English Bible" as our inspiration, a group of us has already managed to update some of Hamlet's soliloquy.

"TO BE OR NOT to be" will soon read as follows:

Should I or shouldn't I? That is the question.
I don't know whether it would be better for me to take a lot of guff and that sort of thing or to fight back against all this trouble I've been having.
Maybe I should drop dead, and sleep;
that's all. And by sleeping hope to end all this emotional conflict that everyone goes through; boy wouldn't that be a solution?
If you could just cop out, close your eyes and sleep. And maybe have a few good dreams. But that's the trouble.
If you're dead, who knows what kind of bad trips you're going to have leaving the station? It sure gives you something to think about.
You have to show some respect; if you don't you could be in for real trouble.

THAT'S AS FAR as we got with Hamlet. But we have also been working on "Romeo and Juliet."

So far it goes like this:

JULIET (on balcony to herself): Oh Romeo, Romeo. Where are you Romeo? Why don't you change your name? Or if you can't do it, I'll work it out some way so I won't be known as a Capulet.

ROMEO (underneath balcony to himself): I wonder if I should stick around and listen to what she's saying, or speak up and jawbone with her.

JULIET: The only thing I hold against you, Romeo, is your name. Personally I like you for yourself, and not because you're a Montague.

Like, what's a Montague? It isn't your hand or your foot or your face, or any other part of your body belonging to a man. Gosh, I wish you had another name.

BUT WHAT'S in a name? Suppose you saw this flower which was called something else besides a rose. It would still smell pretty good, wouldn't it?

And that's the way it is with Romeo. If his name, for example, were Irving, he still would be perfect in my book. Romeo, get rid of your name because it has nothing to do with you, and in exchange, I'll do anything you want me to.

ROMEO (out loud): Okay Juliet, it's a deal. Forget I'm Romeo and call me Loverboy instead.

JULIET: Who is that listening in on everything I've been saying?

ROMEO: I can't tell you who I am, because I hate my name, and from what I can tell, you do, too.

JULIET: Unless I'm stone deaf, you sound like Romeo Montague. Are you or aren't you?

ROMEO: It all depends if it shakes you up or not.

As you see, we still have a little work to do, but if it took 20 years to rewrite the Bible, I believe we've gotten off to a pretty good start.

Wistful gents of forty-five and over who long for a blue-eyed, blonde, adorable little granddaughter to dangle on their knees, might stop dreaming long enough to listen to Harriet Van Horne's story of the acquisitive little four-year-old who sat on grandpa's lap and played with his gold watch chain. "When I die," cooed loving gramp, "this gold chain will go to you." "It's pretty," nodded the little darling. "When are you going to die?"

Petitioning for a divorce after only four months of marriage, a disillusioned wife complained, "That was the most over-introduced man I ever met!"

This Week In The World

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The palace revolution that overthrew Cambodian Chief of State Prince Sihanouk this week was hopefully regarded in some quarters as a token of a pro-Western turn in the affairs of the strategically-situated nation.

Sihanouk was deposed by parliament after a week of rioting in Phnom Penh, the capital, by youths protesting the presence on Cambodian soil of Communist troops from Vietnam. North Vietnam and the Viet Cong have been using Cambodia as a military sanctuary for years.

Cheng Heng, president of the National Assembly, was installed as an interim chief of state, but the real power was believed to rest in the hands of Lt. Gen. Lon Nol, the premier and defense minister, and Deputy Premier Princé Sisowath Sirik Matak.

Sihanouk was on a tour of Communist capitals when he was ousted, trying to persuade Moscow or Peking to force the Vietnamese Reds out of Cambodia. He warned that if they did not do so, he might be overthrown by pro-Western elements in Cambodia.

Nol and Matak are staunch anti-Communists. In an announcement shortly after Sihanouk was ousted, the new administration said it will adhere to his policy of "strict neutrality," but also denounced him for an "attitude. . .against the will of the entire Cambodian nation."

Western observers were waiting to see which statement better sets the tone of the new regime.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

NEW YORK—The first letter carriers' strike in U.S. history "stayed these swift couriers from the completion of their appointed rounds"—first in New York and its suburbs, then in a growing number of cities across the country. Emergency measures were under consideration to meet the situation.

JERUSALEM—Israeli commandos struck 55 miles into Syria to shell an army camp 20 miles beyond Damascus and sabotage a power line in the biggest military action on the northern front since the 1967 war. Israeli spokesmen said the raid was a retaliation for Syrian cease-fire violations.

BOSTON—An Eastern Airlines copilot was killed and his captain and a pistol-packing passenger were wounded in a shoot-out on the flight deck of a Newark-to-Boston shuttle jet. The captain, with bullets in both arms, brought the plane in to a safe landing.

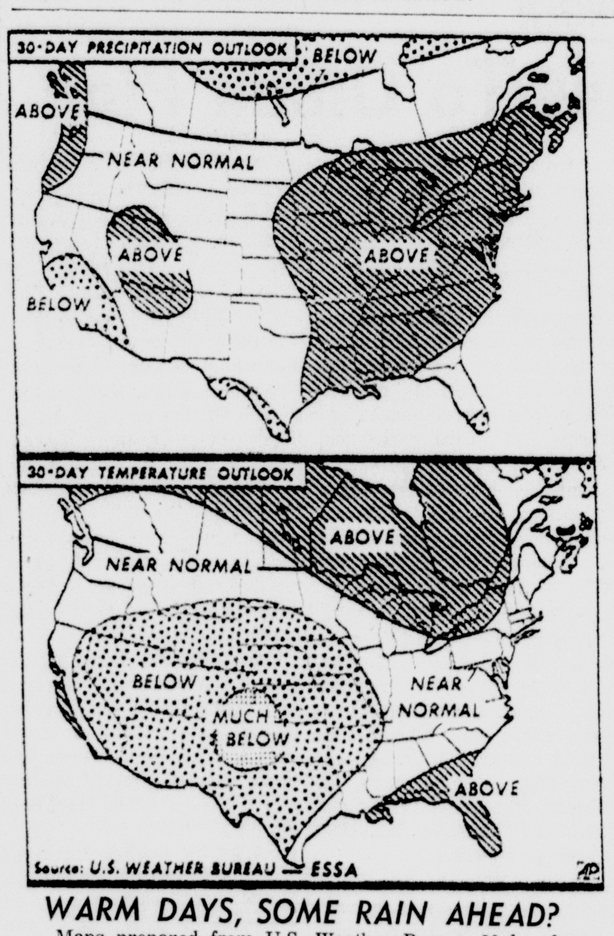
WASHINGTON—President Nixon called for a new approach to federal education grants and loans to ensure that "no qualified student" is barred from college by lack of money.

ERFURT, Germany—West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and East German Premier Willi Stoph met in the first high-level contact between officials of the "two Germanies." No significant progress was reported toward settlement of the problems dividing the country, but the two men agreed to meet again.

WASHINGTON—The Board of Immigration Appeals confirmed the alien status of Thomas G. Jolley, who renounced his U.S. citizenship when he went to Canada to evade the draft. Jolley was told he will be deported unless he leaves the country within 90 days.

SATTAHIP, Thailand — Crewmen of the U.S. munitions ship Columbia Eagle said it hal been hijacked by two young gunmen and steered into Cambodian wattrs. Cambodian authorities said the hijackers will be granted political asylum.

WASHINGTON—The house passed a "model" anti-crime bill for the District of Columbia embodying features the government hopes will be adopted elsewhere—including preventive detention, "no-knock" search and police wiretapping.



WARM DAYS, SOME RAIN AHEAD?

Maps prepared from U.S. Weather Bureau 30-day forecasts show that the seers expect normal or higher temperatures than usual between now and April 15, with about average rainfall. Normal San Rafael rainfall for the period is 3.63 inches; last year saw only 2.54 inches in seven rainy days. The season's total rainfall as of Sunday was 47.87 inches, compared with last year's total of that date of 53.22.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Luckily, Trencherman Cannot See Inside Abused Stomach

Luckily we can't see the inside of the stomach after eating and drinking too much.

Physicans who have peeked into the structure with a gastroscope tell us it is as red and congested as the nasal membranes during the height of a cold.

Gastric irritation may last from 24 to 48 hours after overindulgence.

The gastroscope is a flexible tube with a light on one end and an eyepiece on the other. It is useful in diagnosing many conditions, because the device enables the physician to view the interior of the stomch.

Pictures can now be taken with the gastrocamera.

IT IS SURPRISING how angry the inside appears without causing a single symptom. Dr. William Beaumont learned this in 1833. The Army surgeon observed the stomach of Alexis St. Martin, a Canadian who had been shot in the abdomen.

The wound never healed and, through the opening in the abdominal wall, Dr. Beaumont observed the variations in the color of the lining of the organ from hour to hour.

Sometimes it was dotted with deep red pimples, whereas at other times there were irregular red patches varying in circumference from ½ to 1½ inches.

DIGESTION WAS RETARDED after eating and drinking and the wall looked irritated and congested. Alexis was unaware of these changes and was quite bored by the attention he received.

Some persons develop indigestion after dietary indiscretions of any type. The use of certain medications will do the same. The worst offenders are highly spiced, rich foods and fried and greasy edibles.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.

TB HOSPITALS

D.G. writes: Do most states have adequate facilities to take care of patients with tuberculosis?

REPLY

Yes. They have more than adequate facilities due to less TB and the progress made in treating the disease. In many states, the small sanatoria are being closed or converted into nursing homes. It has also been suggested that we treat tuberculosis sufferers in general hospitals or admit individuals with other respiratory diseases into our existing tuberculosis hospitals.

CLAWLIKE FINGERS

F.L. writes: Does function return to the hand after an operation for Dupuytren's contracture?

REPLY

Yes—this is the purpose of the operation. In this condition, the tissues of the palm thicken and the ensuing scar tissue curls up the digits, especially the small and ring fingers.

PSYCHO DEFINED

D.I. writes: What is the definition of a psycho?

REPLY

Psycho means soul or mind but the word often is used as slang for a neurotic or hypochondriac with innumerable complaints of nervous or emotional origin.

RUPTURED COLON

E.E. writes: What would cause the colon to rupture?

REPLY

An infected appendix or a diverticulum is the most common cause. Other possibilities include cancer, hernia,, or gangrene from a circulatory disturbance.

SUN AND FEVER

K.O. writes: Should a baby who is running a temperature be kept out of the Florida sun?

REPLY

Temperature, no. Fever, yes.

Today's Health Hint—German measles can be wiped out via immunization.

Gallinas School Vandalism Probed

Employees arriving for work at Gallinas School in Santa Venetia Thursday discovered that the school had been broken into and extensive damage done by vandals, sheriff's deputies said.

The worst damage was in the library, where books were scattered, desks smashed and furniture overturned.

A fire extinguisher apparently had been used to smash open the door of the principal's office, deputies said. It was not known whether anything had been stolen, according to deputies, and there was no estimate of damage.

FROM THE HEART

The Best Prayers Require Few Words

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The best prayers are those that rise spontaneously from the human heart at moments of great need, penitence or gratitude.

They require few words: "Help me...forgive me...thank you."

To acknowledge the supremacy of spontaneous prayers, however, is not to say that men can get along without more formal prayers which have been thought out and written down in advance

Prepackaged prayer has two great merits. It is a way of reaching out toward God in hours of spiritual drought. And it can serve to remind us of dimensions of need, forms of guilt or occasions for thankfulness that may have escaped our attention.

The greatest and most widely used formal prayer is the one that Jesus taught his disciples. Here is a new ecumenical translation that has been prepared by Protestant and Catholic scholars:

"Our Father in heaven, holy be your name,

"Your kingdom come, your will be done,

"On earth as in heaven.

"Give us today our daily bread.

"Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who sin against us.

"Do not bring us to the test

"But deliver us from evil.

"For the kingdom, the power and the glory are yours now and for ever."

The gentle and Christlike St. Francis of Assisi is the author of two prayers which men have found perennially pertinent to their needs.

One is very brief:

"O God, help me to want to love you."

The other, somewhat longer, is St. Francis' famous peace prayer:

"Lord, make me an instrument of thy peace.

"Where there is hatred, let me sow love;

"Where there is doubt, faith;

"Where there is despair, hope;

"Where there is darkness, light;

"And where there is sickness, joy.

"O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console;

"To be understood as to understand;

"To be loved as to love;

"For it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life. Amen."

The great sculptor Michelangelo was a devout man driven by tumultuous passions. In his diary was found this prayer:

"Lord, on you I call for help against my blind and senseless torment, since you alone can renew inwardly and outwardly my mind, my will, and my strength, which are weak."

Psychiatrist Will Give Series Finale

Dr. John W. Perry, a psychiatrist, will speak on "Psychic Phenomena and Religious Experience in the Light of Jungian Psychology" at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the First Congregational Church of San Rafael.

Perry's talk is the final in a Lenten series "Imprisoned Splendor."

PROTESTANT MERGER

Pros, Cons To Union Plan

(Editor's Note — This is the first of two articles on reasons behind plans for uniting nine Protestant denominations. The second follows next week.)

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Now that different churches are friendly to each other, there's no reason for them to unite organizationally," a Presbyterian layman remarked. "It would just mean more bigness and uniformity. We need the different kinds of churches to suit different kinds of people."

That's a common reaction to the developing plans to unite a broad swath of American Protestantism.

Many people see it simply as a drive for an institutional colossus that would produce bureaucratic controls, homogenize everybody into one mold, and snuff out the spark of variety.

But planners of the unified church see precisely the opposite effects, and cite different motivations for the endeavor.

They say one of the main things wrong with the present divided, compartmentalized church life is that it segregates believers into homogenized, uniform blocs, racially, economically and socially.

The system, they say, tends to wall people off into think-alike, worship-alike, act-alike cubicles, insulated against mutual stimulation, challenges and the cross-flow of differing ideas and ways.

Without tangible links and channels to provide that enriching interaction, they maintain that it remains blocked off and dammed up, but that unification would reopen the arteries of fuller, enlivening Christian circulation through all the varied parts of the whole.

"For as in one body, we have many members and all the members do not have the same function," St. Paul wrote, "so we, though many, are one body in Christ, and individually members of one another."

That's the sort of intermingling of special values, differing strengths distinctive insights that a united church seeks to bring into real functional relationships, along with varied kinds and experiences of people.

Consequently, rather than the monolithic sameness characterizing many of the present denominational segments, the unification plan sees the fusion and interplay of varied modes and manners as a prime benefit.

Nine denominations, totaling 25 million members, are involved in current consideration of the plan, recommended last week by their delegates to the Consultation on Church Union.

They include the mainly white Episcopal, United Methodist, United Presbyterian, Presbyterian U.S. (Southern) and Christian (Disciples) churches, the United Church of Christ, and three Negro denominations, the African Methodist Episcopal, Zion and Christian Methodist Episcopal churches.

Another common assumption which the plan seeks to overcome is the idea that followers of Jesus should choose or fashion a church in their own image, made up of people of the same class, race and tastes.

The "church of your choice," an old phrase puts it, or "my church" and "our church."

Theologians, however, consider it heresy for Christians to feel they should shape a church to please themselves, simply along lines of pleasant, compatible fellowship, avoiding associations with those who are different.

Christian teaching always has stressed that Christ's communion embraces all who come, not just a selective, one-dimensional clique. He sought out the poor, the humble, "the least," not just the socially desirable.

"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female," St. Paul wrote, "for you are all one in Christ Jesus."

It is to try to implement, in functioning reality, this inclusive aspect of faith that the united church planners set special provisions to draw congregations of differing racial-econoic makeup into close working relationship.

Several would be grouped into each basic "parish" unit, sharing facilities, personnel and programs, guided by jointly elected parish councils.

Concerning the claim that the plan would bring more centralized bureaucracy, the planners instead saw this as a major fault of the present system, and made local-regional flexibility and control a basic feature of the plan.

Except for guiding standards of Scripture and classic doctrinal statements, each district would be free to develop its own varied pattern and programs, with pastors assigned only with parish agreement.

Bishops would have pastoral oversight in each district and larger region, but those units, as well as the parish and the national assembly, would be governed by elected delegates, with laymen outnumbering clergy 2 to 1.

Byzantine Expert Will Lead Choir

Jerome Caran, Greek Orthodox liturgical authority and composer, has accepted position of choir director of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin.

Accepting the position on a voluntary basis, Caran, has already formed a choir to sing at the Sunday 10 a.m. services. The church meets in the Montgomery Chapel on the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

The church board also announced this week the appointment of Leonora Bloom of Mill Valley as organist.

Caran, who lives in San Rafael, composes and arranges Byzantine and liturgical music.

He formerly has been director of music at the Orthodox Church in San Francisco.

10TH ANNIVERSARY

From Rented Loft To Modern Building

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

Next Sunday—Easter Sunday—will be a red letter day for the Wesminister Presbyterian Church in Tiburon.

Behides honoring the Arisen Christ, the congregation will mark the 10th anniversary in its new building a far cry from its tiny beginning in a rented loft over Herbert's Sherbert Shop in the Tiburon Boardwalk in the spring of 1957.

The church was organized on June 2, 1957, with 95 charter members. Its roll now numbers 280.

Busting at the seams in its tiny quarters and using Northwestern Pacific Railway coaches as church school classes for its youngsters, the congregation took the giant step with the initiation of a building program. It hired an architect, Donald A. Hardison, of Richmond, who drew up plans for a proposed $100,000 structure on land located at 240 Tiburon Boulevard.

Under guidance of its founding pastor, Rev. Forrest Youngquist the building was ready for its first use on Easter Day 10 years ago this coming Sunday.

Since 1960 the church has grown steadily, both in its Christian service and community involvement. While Youngquist laid the foundation, the spirtual growth was carried forward with the arrival of Rev. George Walker in January 1960, who served as pastor until October 1968. The church welcomed its present minister, Dr. William M. Perdue in April of last year.

In Christian endeavor, the church has a fully staffed church school program now being directed by Mrs. Joseph Verhalen and Mrs. John J. Cashin, longtime members of the congregation.

In the field of music, its guiding light has been Mrs. Charles L. Bigelow, who founded the highly successful children's choir in 1959.

Coupled with its involvement in the Ecumenical Association for Housing, which was organized in March of last year, the church is also an active participant in TEAM, also an ecumenical movement involving nine other Southern Marin churches.

Another milestone for the church has been its Pentecost festivals launched in May 1967, with the aim of fostering the arts. Last year the principal festival offering was presentation of a performance of "American: Black and White," by the American Conservatory Theater (ACT) of San Francisco.

Purim Rites Will Be Held Tomorrow

A Purim service will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Congregation Kol Shofar. The reading of the Megillah will be given.

Youngsters in costumes depicting the story of the Book of Esther will be judged and awarded prizes.

Marin Hurler Bill Lee Confident Of Red Sox Job

By RALPH CHATOIAN

A "burn-out" is an expression Bill Lee of Terra Linda, young pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, used yesterday during a long distance telephone conversation from the Sox' training camp at Winter Haven, Fla.

"A pitcher can be burned out if he does too much relief pitching. I would much rather be a starter," he said.

The Red Sox made their first cuts of the spring campaign yesterday, and Lee survived. He said there were seven left-handers at the start of camp and the team was expected to keep four on the roster. Two have been cut and of the five remaining Gary Peters, who the Red Sox got in trade from the White Sox, and reliever Sparky Lyle are almost assured of sticking.

"That leaves three of us fighting for two spots," Lee said. He sounds confident of his chances of sticking with the big club, but adds his world won't collapse if he is sent to the minors. He knows he'll be back.

He played with Pittsfield, Mass. of the Eastern League, a Red Sox farm club before being called to the parent club during last season. He saw very little action, and was used only in relief.

"They would use me only if we were way in front or way behind," he said. "If it was close I knew Lyle would get the call and I would just sit on my glove. I think they could have taken a chance with me when we knew we were out of the money.

"If I was doing some long-inning relief I always knew late in the game I would be taken out for a pinch hitter and Lyle would come in. That wouldn't have been so bad but I always considered myself a good hitter."

And then, as so many pitchers like to do, he started talking about bats rather than curves.

"I'm the leading hitter on the team so far this year," he said. "I'm batting 1.000. How many at bats? Just one, he laughed, but I knocked in a run."

He said he likes to bat and always has. "If I get out early enough I can feed some balls into the pitching machine and take some cuts. But soon as one of the non-pitchers comes out he can chase me out. And they always do."

After starring for Terra Linda High as one of the best pitchers in the Marin County Athletic League, Lee, now 23, went on to bigger things at University of Southern California, including NCAA Championship and all-tournament honors.

He was signed by the Red Sox in June of 1968 and assigned to Pittsfield.

"If I got sent down it would probably be Louisville," Lee said, "and I know I would eventually be back up here. Louisville (of the AAA International League) is good baseball and I know I would get a lot of pitching in."

He has worked only seven innings so far this spring, has eight strikeouts and no walks. He's slated to start on the mound Tuesday against the Houston Astros. "I'm scheduled to go about four innings if I can, and (Jim) Lonborg will follow."

Lee said he has added a little weight and feels stronger this year. He stands 6-foot-3 and weighs 207 pounds.

Lee, who has been married just a little more than a year (his wife, Maria, is a former Miss Alaska), is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W.F. Lee Jr. of 575 Montecillo Road, San Rafael.

Lee is originally from Los Angeles, coming to Marin County with his parents just before starting high school.

"How's Terra Linda doing in baseball?" asked the personable southpaw, not neglecting his alma mata. "They sure have a football dynasty going on over there."

Then he switched to his brother, Paul, former Terra Linda prep star now playing baseball at University of Santa Barbara. "When Santa Barbara played S.C. all the guys on the S.C. team were razzing Paul, saying things like 'why didn't you go to a good school like your brother,' things like that. Well, Paul came up and hit a 450-foot homer. He really showed 'em."

And Bill Lee wants to show the Red Sox brass. He wants to crash that starting rotation and you never can tell. He just might.

A Stand-In For Arnie

By A Duffer's Duffer

Last weekend, I ceased to be a civilian. I joined one of the world's foremost fighting forces—Arnie's Army .

As you know, I have been assigned to this expeditionary force from time to time—but as a non-combat correspondent. If captured, I was to be turned over to the Red Cross.

I covered the time they put down the Jack Nicklaus uprising in Augusta. I was there during the Great Retreat at San Francisco in 1966. I covered the victorious skirmishes from Rancho to Palm Springs.

I watched the Army trample the bougainvillea on 100 battlefields. I was there when it swept through the sand traps of Oakmont, when its air force swept the skies over Georgia, trailing a banner, "Go, Arnie, Go." I saw its navy unfurl a banner from a rowboat at Pebble Beach.

An Army Without Banners

It is an army without banners. Its uniform is the open-chested hula shirt, the biceps tattoo, the cigar stub, the chauffeur's license that entitles you to drive a semi, and a meal ticket to a diner in Latrobe.

It is a citizen's army. It is not one of those Hapsburg Chocolate Soldier types. It carries a six-pack, and scorns the niceties of sports spectating. Camp followers in golf have frequently seen the quiet, introspective "Lovely shot, Gene" type audience. They treat golf as if it were an opera. Arnie's Irregulars treat it as if it were a cock fight. It is a whole army-full of Dirty Dozens. It is a publinx, pool hall group, not parade-ground cadets. Nobody who ever got a starting time at a course not run by the city is eligible.

My job will be to coordinate the exhortations of "Go for it, Arnie, take the wood!" when our leader is confronted with a nice, safe 4-iron layup in front of a pond, or a try-for-a-miracle 3-wood across a body of water big enough for ferryboats, and trapped on all four sides with the pin cut horizontally out of the side of a hill. It will also be my duty to fall out of a tree with a loud Snap! at the precise instant some enemy is lining up a pressure putt for a tie. I may also be expected to bellow "Charge!!" and stream through the rough, rattling six other twosomes on the course as Arnie uncorks one off the tee.

Dragooned By The Commander

I was dragooned into the army by the Commander-in-Chief himself when he asked me to accept an award for him at Palm Springs last week from the Southern California Golf Assn .

"But, Arnie, I'm not eligible!" I protested.

"Why, did you ever break par any place?" he asked.

"No," I admitted, "but I have played L.A. North. And I BELONG to Riviera. To get in the army, you can't have gone to any driving range before dark or played any course where you didn't take a subway or an A&P truck and wait in line at the starter's shack."

"You think about it," said Arnie. "I gotta go win Monsanto." And he hung up.

Has Several Qualifications

I thought about it. And I finally found I was a born non-com for the Army. No. 1, I drink beer from a can. No. 2, I automatically root for tournament leaders to shank, hook, slice or stub, and Arnie never wins when he leads. Athletically, I make it for the following additional reasons:

3. Most holes picked up in a season.

4. Most times heard, "You're away!"

5. Most greens reached in 7.

6. Most times heard, "That's good—what does it give you, a nine?"

7. Most times heard, "Hit another!"

8. Most balls left in sand trap after two swings at it.

9. Most times heard, "Do you wanna press?" by the fourth hole.

I called Arnie happily to tell him I would accept the award, as I could pass the physical for the army. He listened as I read my qualifications. "Good, you made corporal," he said. "Get a tattoo."

I told him would send the award to his new course in Orlando. "Fine," he said, making rapid calculations. "With your slice, I will send a boat to pick it up in the Dry Tortugas."

Giants Tell It, 'Sayonara, Baby-san!'

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's chilly weather is quite a contrast to spring in Arizona, says San Francisco Giants manager Clyde King.

"We had been playing in Arizona in 85-degree temperatures compared to Tokyo's 45 degrees," King said today after the Giants fell to Tokyo's Yomiuri Giants 6-5.

"I hope my boys play better in the next eight games," King added, referring to the Giants' exhibition tour in Japan.

Sadaharu Oh slammed a home run with two outs in the 11th inning for the Tokyo victory. Or, to loosely translate the way Giant broadcaster Russ Hodges would describe such a dramatic home run, it was a "Sayonara, baby-san!"

It was Oh's second homer of the game. The first, in the opening inning, was good for two runs. Tokyo's other three runs came on a seventh inning home run by Shigeo Nagashima.

Nagashima came up after San Francisco pitcher Frank Reberger intentionally walked Oh.

San Francisco had tied the score at 2-2 in the fourth inning on catcher Dick Dietz' solo home run into the centerfield bleachers. Then Tito Fuentes singled to center and after one out shortstop Hal Lanier doubled him home.

After Nagashima's three-run homer, San Francisco scored two runs in the eighth. Willie Mays hit a two bagger and then stopped at third as Ken Henderson hit safely and made it to second when the throw went home.

Fuentes, with two outs, singled through third, scoring Mays and Henderson.

San Francisco tied the score at 5-5 and sent the game into extra innings when outfielder Steve Whitaker homered off the first pitch of the ninth inning by Japanese pitcher Hidetaka Watanabe.

Mays had two two baggers and a single in four times at bat. First baseman Willie McCovey did not play.

King said Mike McCormick, 31-year-old lefthander, would start Sunday against the Lotte Orions in Tokyo.

BLACK ARMBANDS, PLACARDS AT TRACK OPENER

Hair Ye, Hair Ye: Tam Clips Redwood

Redwood High School's track team lost its first dual meet in three years yesterday, but the Giants, running amidst all kinds of hairy problems, almost pulled it out at the mile relay finish tape.

The Giants, minus some competitors who did not or could not compete because their hair was not the school's required length, almost won the meet on Tom Estudillo's final surge in the last leg of the mile relay until Tam's Bill Baker won it with a lunge at the tape. Final score: Tamalpais 67, Redwood 60.

The meet was run at Larkspur under the glare of publicity over the hair issue and a handful of students showed up with placards protesting a federal judge's recent decision which allowed a coach to require any length of hair he favored. Some students, and some Tamalpais track squad members, wore black sympathy armbands.

Redwood sophomore Guy O'Farrell also showed up with a black armband and had run a lap of the mile race before Redwood coach Stan Tobiason spotted him.

"Yes, I did tell him he was through for the meet, to go to the showers," he said. "That's not part of the Redwood uniform and all the boys know it. Whether I threw my clipboard down angrily or not is a matter of description. I can tell you this, I was teed off."

Tobiason also ordered freshman Mike Killeen to cut his hair which was too long in front, after he had won the frosh mile.

"It was also falling down in front of his eyes," he said. "No, he didn't quit the team, not as far as I know. That would be a big surprise to me."

Whether the hair issue had an effect on the outcome of the varisty meet was a matter of debate, but Tamalpais coach Bruce Grant, something of an accurate prognosticator on meet outcomes, said that, "We would have probably beat them by a point if they had everybody."

Kevin Pusser, one of the Redwood track stars involved in the hair court case, ran the mile after deciding to cut his hair to regulation length, but finished a convincing second to Vian Collier of Tamalpais, who wore a black armband and had long hair.

Estudillo was a chief factor in the Redwood showing, winning both the 440 and the 880 yard runs. Teammate Phil Simon took the discus and the shot and Dennis Kuwatani won both hurdles.

But the top performances of the meet was turned in by Mike Arago, only a junior, who won the two-mile race for Tamalpais in a swift 9:48, a meet record and a time that places him fourth among the all-time best efforts in Marin County Athletic League history.

In other meets that opened the 1970 MCAL season yesterday, league favorite San Rafael ran away from Drake, as expected, hammering the Pirates, 103-24; Terra Linda mauled Novato, 98-27, and San Marin topped Marin Catholic, 59-40.

San Rafael won all but two events against the Pirates as Bob Peterson turned in a triple win performances, topped by a 10 flat effort in the 100-yard-dash. He also won the 220 and the long jump. Dennis Silva of San Rafael won both hurdles while Rich Smartt of Drake won the high jump with a six-foot effort.

Mark Jones led the Terra Linda charge against Novato, winning the 120 low hurdles in 15.9 and the pole vault at 12-6.

JACKSONVILLE OPEN

Cerrudo Slips And Trevino Soars

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Blustery winds sweeping across the Hidden Hills Country Club had a lot to do with second-round play in the Greater Jacksonville Open, and Lee Trevino was perfectly happy with the results.

"Let the winds blow," he said after soaring to a tie for the lead with Bobby Mitchell of Danville, Va.

"The more it blows, the more I feel like I'm home in El Paso."

As Mitchell and Trevino settled into their tie with seven-under par 137s, other golfers were cursing the breezes that sent shots flying right and left of the narrow fairways.

Trevino negotiated the 6,943-yard course five strokes below par at 67.

LOW BALL

"I've been on tour regularly for a couple years, so I've kind of lost that El Paso low ball," said the colorful National Open champion of 1968. "But I still feel comfortable in the wind."

Mitchell took his share of first place on a spectacular eagle on the 440-yard sixth hole, tacking a 68 to his opening day 69.

"There were about 60 people around the green and when they started shouting, I just dropped my 8 iron to the ground and joined in," he said.

The 30-year-old Trevino and 27-year-old Mitchell took a one-stroke lead over Dale Douglass of Denver into today's third round.

(Tomorrow's final round will be televised by ABC starting at 1 p.m., PST.)

Douglass, 34, missed a 10-foot putt on the 18th green that would have tied him for the lead. But he was satisfied with his second straight 69 in what he called "a very difficult wind."

Two strokes behind Douglass were home pro Dan Sikes and veteran Don Bies of Seattle at 140.

CERRUDO SLIPS

Ron Cerrudo, the mod young Napa Californian who shared the first round lead with 68, slipped to 73 and was tied with six others at 141.

A trim Jack Nicklaus was one of them, but the others of the fading "Big Three" blew out of contention.

Arnold Palmer shot 77 for a 147 total and it was his second bad experience of the day. A partially constructed Jacksonville apartment development in which he is co-owner had an early morning $35,000 fire loss.

Gary Player soared to a 79 and missed the cut with a halfway total of 151.

He took three blows in the same trap on the 375-yard eighth hole and the resulting triple bogey sent him toward Miami and next week's tourney.

Phil Rodgers, a veteran from La Jolla, Calif., shot the best round of the tourney, 66, but with his opening 76 he was five strokes off the pace at 142 along with British Open champion Tony Jacklin and five others.

It took a score of 148 or better to survive the halfway cut to 70 players and ties for the run at the $100,000 prize money Sunday.

MARIN PREP BASEBALL HIGHLIGHTS

Drake Snaps Slump With Big Upset

Drake High School's baseball team, thirsty for a win all season, finally found the well yesterday and the Pirates didn't pick a patsy either.

After five straight losses, the Pirates, behind the two-hit pitching of junior Jay Emery, nailed Riordan High School of San Francisco, the favorite in the formidable Catholic Athletic League, 5-1, at Drake yesterday.

John Loane got a two-run triple that sparked a three-run outburst in the first inning, giving the Pirates their first lead of the season, a lead they never gave up.

Steve Hale had a pair of singles to support the seven-hit Drake attack.

San Marin edged Piner High of Santa Rosa, 3-2, in Santa Rosa's Doyle Park, as Dennis Bueler pitched a four-hitter and Greg Mazeres doubled in the winning run.

TOMALES MAULED

San Rafael mauled Tomales, 10-1, on an 11-hit attack, even though the two teams were tied at 1-1 for four innings before the Bulldogs scored nine runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Chuck Raznakov, Larry Brazda and Bruce Maglione all had three hits for the Bulldogs, now 4-1 on the season.

In a night game in Sacramento, Redwood topped Sacramento Metro League champ Mira Loma, 3-1, as big Tom Wickert pitched a two-hitter, scored one run and tripled in another.

John Boro, fresh off the basketball Tournament of Champions, tripled in one Redwood run and Scott Berrie singled in another before a crowd of some 800 fans. The Giants are now 2-2 on the season.

Marin Catholic lost a 4-1 decision to Justin High School in Napa with Steve Sherry's triple producing the Wildcats' only run and Terra Linda was bombed by Vallejo, 8-0, as Vallejo scored all of its runs in the fifth inning. All the runs were unearned.

Ziegler, the hottest young bowler in Marin County, did it in the Redwood Junior League with games of 279, 269 and 214. It's the second 700 for Ziegler, who has been consistently rolling series scores in the 600s this season.

Another young member of the league, Jim Schott, a 16-year-old sophomore at Redwood, rolled games of 225, 266 and 212 for a 703 series.

There were also three 700 sets rolled by the adults at Greenbrae, for a total of five on the week. Fred Blackburn and Bill Baioni rolled 728 and 727 in the California Trophy Traveling League and Dan Burke 703 in the 910 Travel.

Terra Linda, Tam Win Big Swims

Marin County Athletic League's two unbeaten swim powerhouses stayed that way yesterday, but not without some trepidation.

Terra Linda High broke six school records—and needed them—in a cloose 52-43 win over Novato, while Tamalpais had to hold off galvanized Redwood, charged up by junior Brian Hennessey, 50-45.

The wins gave both teams 5-0 league records, but their eventual meeting isn't until April 3, after Easter vacation.

In other meets yesterday, San Rafael swamped Drake, 61-32, and San Marin downed Marin Catholic, 60-16.

Terra Linda got superlative efforts from Thom Guthrie and Rick Demont. Guthrie won the 200-yard free style and the 100 free, the latter in a school record time of 52.6 seconds while Demont, elevated from Class B, won the 200 individual medley in a record time of 2:15.4 and the 400 free in another record time of 4:12.1. Both Guthrie and Demont were part of the record-breaking 400 free relay team which finished first in 3:35.0.

Hennessey anchored Redwood's winning medley relay team and won the 50 free in 24.5 and the 100 butterfly in 59.5, but it wasn't quite enough to upset the Tamalpais applecart as the Indians won the free relay and had enough depth to win.

Marin Swim Team Wins

College of Marin's swimming team got off to a flying start in Camino Norte Conference action yesterday but the Tar tennis and track teams did not fare nearly as well in loop competition.

The Tar swimmers swamped West Valley of Campbell, 63-50, in Kentfield as Bruce Averill won the 200-yard individual medley and the 200 backstroke in 2:13.6 and 2:14.8, respectively.

The Tar 400 free relay team of Charley Collins, Dave Topance, Roger Backstedt and Greg Meyers won in another school record time of 3:28.4 as the Tars upped their overall record to 7 wins, 6 losses.

Sonoma High School's baseball team unloaded a home run attack and went on to down St. Helena, 16-1 in a non-league game at Sonoma High School yesterday.

Pitcher Dan Briggs helped hurl a three-hitter and had a homer, along with Bill Weyl and Jon Nordstrom.

In the only other Sonoma County prep action yesterday, Petaluma High School's swim team was submerged by Santa Rosa, 79-20 in a North Bay League I meet.

Today is Saturday, March 21, the 80th day of 1970 with 285 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1970 Thomas Jefferson of Virginia became the first Secretary of State in the Cabinet of George Washington.

In 1918 American and German forces engaged in the World War I Battle of the Somme.

In 1945 7,000 Allied planes dropped more than 12,000 tons of bombs on Germany during a daytime raid.

In 1962 Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev pledged that Russia would cooperate with the United States in the peaceful exploration of space.

A though for the day: Norwegian poet Hendik Ibsen said, "Marriage is a thing you've got to give your whole mind to."

Tiburon Eyes Foliage Law

Final approval of an ordinance designed to keep foliage from obstructing residents' views will be considered Monday night by the Tiburon City Council.

The council, which will meet at 8 p.m. in city hall, approved the measure, 4-1, on first reading at the March 9 session.

In other business, the council is scheduled to set hearings on the Buskirk-Noble plan for downtown development and consider new trash disposal methods.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Line Of Play May Work, But Still Wrong Way To Play Hand

Any reader of this column can tell that declarer will make four hearts in today's hand if he guesses which opponent has the queen of hearts. The average reader gives the matter deep thought, steals a look at the East-West cards and then "decides to finesse through East for the queen of hearts. This line of play works, but it is still the wrong way to play the hand.

SOUTH'S SEAT

Put yourself in the South seat, trying to make four hearts. Imagine that you are playing the hand at the bridge table and that your opponents refuse to let you see their cards. And imagine that the East-West cards may be quite differently divided from the way you see in the diagram.

Now, how should you play the hand? You can't tell who has the queen and you can't afford to guess wrong.

If you play the hand correctly, you don't try to guess who has the queen of hearts. You don't take any finesses. You simply let the opponents do all the work for you.

CASH TOP CARDS

You begin by cashing your top cards in the side suits. After West takes two clubs and makes you ruff the third club, you lead a spade to dummy's king and a spade back to the ace. Then you cash the top diamonds and ruff a diamond in dummy. Ruff dummy's last club, and now you are left with only the ten of spades and the K-J-10 of trumps in your hand. You have two low spades and the ace-eight of trumps in the dummy.

Lead your ten of spades and let the opponents take the trick. Now any return at all will give you a free trump finesse. You will pick up the queen of hearts no matter which opponent has it.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, bids one spade.

S - Q J 9 5
H - 5
D - Q 10 9 4
C - A K J 10

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

You would have a fine takeout double of an opening bid of one heart, because you would have good support in any unbid suit. You cannot afford to use the takeout double over one spade because you lack support for the unbid major—the one suit in which you should have good four-card support.

Vandalism Alert In Rohnert Park

Rohnert Park's vandalism problem is serious, but not as bad as in other cities, Police Chief Robert Dennett has told the Rohnert Park Homeowners Association.

Dennett, addressing the homeowners Thursday, said residents should be more alert for acts of vandalism and report them promptly to police.

Skyral Sweeney, association vice president, said Dennett was asked to return soon to speak on drug problems in the city.

AN ISRAELI TERRORIST played by Sal Mineo falls in love with a young Israeli girl portrayed by Jill Haworth in "Exodus," the motion picture to be shown in two parts, Monday and Tuesday at 9 p.m., on Channels 3 and 4. Filmed in color on location, it is the story of Israel's struggle for independence, and based on the Leon Uris novel.

Advocates Argue TV In The Courts

Television coverage in the courtroom — an issue made vividly topical by the dramatic charges and countercharges during the "Chicago Seven" trial — will be examined on the educational television network program, "The Advocates," Sunday at 7 p.m. on Channel 9.

The live national colorcast will originate from KCET in Los Angeles and will debate the question: "Should your state give every criminal defendant the right to allow television to cover his trial?"

The program will precede by one evening the first American telecast of a courtroom trial.

The NET Journal production, "Trial — The City and the County of Denver vs. Lauren R. Watson," will be presented in four 90-minute segments at 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The trial involves a former Black Panther charged with resisting arrest.

In "The Advocates" debate, proponents of cameras in the courtroom will contend that television coverage will help assure the defendant of a fairer trial, while opponents will hold that it will merely give the defendant a powerful forum from which to rail against the judicial system and promulgate revolutionary political theories.

Guest advocate Kevin O'Connell will argue in favor of televised trials, and advocate Howard Miller will present an opposing case. Victor Palmieri will moderate and the principal guest is to be announced.

Here are some of the further arguments advanced in favor of televising trials:

It would encourage impartiality by the judge, discourage false and misleading testimony by witnesses and influence attorneys and others in the courtroom to conduct themselves fairly and with dignity.

Also, historically a defendant has the right to public trial. That right exists so the public can act as watchdog over the defendants right to a fair trial, and the right of the press to cover the trial stems from the fact that the press is part of the public.

It is further argued that courts now discriminate against the television press in favor of newspapers, in that reporters are allowed to record testimony and cameras are not. Modern telecasting equipment, it is pointed out, can be made virtually invisible and noiseless. Also, it is said that television would help people understand the judicial process and their legal rights, and do much to remove the mystery of the system that, it is charged, some lawyers work to preserve.

Here are some of the arguments against televising trials:

It is claimed that television, in its pursuit of a mass audience, is at times tasteless and sensational and would commercialize the judicial scene, telecasting only notorious cases or trials of the famous.

There also is concern that television could become a propoganda medium for the government as well as the defendant. Proponents of that argument cite the televised trials in Cuba, Russia, and Iraq, where crowds shouted support of the government and vilifications against the accused.

An argument against the opinion that cameras will assure a fairer trial is that reporters and spectators in the courtroom already protect these rights, and that the added protection afforded by television is not worth the risk of potential abuse. Another argument is that television would have undesirable psychological effects on the court, scaring off witnesses, distracting jurors and even encouraging showmanship by the judge and attorneys.

"The Advocates" is a 39-part series of live televised debates on topical, decidable issues, made possible by grants from the Ford Foundation and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The Busy Life Of Henry Kent

He's Been Gestapo-Hunter, Business Man And Pastor

By DON KEOWN

Rev. Henry Kent is a man whose present interests are as varied as his past occupations.

He has been a student earning degrees in economics, European history and theology in two countries, his native Holland and the United States. He began a career in the import-export business before World War II and resumed it afterwards.

That work was interrupted by three years of service with the United States Army as an agent for the Counter - Intelligence Corps, first as a linguist interrogating prisoners, and then as an investigator specializing in tracking down German Gestapo chiefs wanted for war crimes.

Finally he left the import-export field for theology, and has served as pastor of three California churches, the last of these St. Luke Presbyterian Church of San Rafael.

HIS CHURCH and the pulpit are foremost among his many interests.

He is active in civic and service groups, with the American Red Cross a particular interest. He is currently the Marin chapter chairman.

He is an ardent and expert photographer.

He enjoys good music. He plays bridge well—"I have already won a few master points." He revels in the outdoors and camping.

HE HAS MORE esoteric interests, such as his preoccupation with logotherapy, which he describes as "a therapy developed by Victor Frankel to find new meaning in life, which I think is extremely important today," and the International Society for General Semantics.

Of the latter, he says: "It is devoted to a certain outlook on life that was first developed by Alfred Korzybski in the 1930s. It holds that much of our misunderstandings stem from our inability to differentiate between a word—which is only a symbol—and the actual thing."

Far from least among Reverend Kent's interests is his family, which consists of wife Carla, who works as a medical secretary; son Paul, who is a sophomore at the University of California at Santa Cruz; daughter Rita, who has just started nurse's training in San Francisco, and youngest daughter Sandi, who is a junior at San Rafael High School.

HENRY KENT was born in Nymegen, Holland, March 5, 1914, and reared in that country. He attended the University of Nederlandse Handelschoogeschool in Rotterdam for three years, studying economics. He then went into his father's food import and export business in 1937.

He was still with that business and living in Rotterdam when the was flared up in 1940.

"I was in the heart of that city when it was bombed so devastatingly by the Germans in 1940," he says.

THEN CAME the invasion. Somehow "by devious means," young Kent managed to escape from Nazi-held Holland in 1941, through France to Spain, then on to Cuba, Miami, New York and ultimately to Vermont "where I knew a fellow I had gone to school with."

His parents were already in the United States, having come here on a trip and having remained when their own country fell into German hands.

Henry Kent worked a year for a machine tool company, then decided to enter the U.S. Army.

HIS THREE years of service earned him a Bronze Star and, as he puts it, "a few other insignificant things."

He could speak fluently in four languages—German, Dutch, French and English—and the military was quick to take advantage of that talent.

And his counter - intelligence work, particularly the tracking down of Gestapo leaders, "took me to places I had never dreamed of seeing."

AMONG THOSE places were some of the hottest combat areas of the war. He landed in Normandy with the Allied invaders and was present for all the major battles through Normandy to the liberation of Paris.

And he was with the first intelligence teams to enter Germany going all the way to Leipzip, now in East Germany.

It was an exciting and dangerous interlude in the life of the young Dutch-born business man. But after the war, he returned to the United States and to New York where he reentered the import-export business with a company there.

It was there, too, that he met a group of people who were associated with Norman Vincent Peale's Marble Collegiate Church. They interested him in the church and particularly in a fellowship group that held Forum meetings "much like what we call encounter groups today."

"RELIGION," Kent admits, "was not my thing then. I found the ping pong, the social events, the programs that were part of, or followed, the meetings far more interesting." But he also found the people of Marble Collegiate Church warm and friendly. "And I began to discover things about myself and others."

For one thing, he found that "it made no difference what religion you belonged to." The important thing was some source of faith and strength.

HE NOTICED, too, the constant attention that these new

REV. HENRY KENT is pictured in the pulpit of the St. Luke Presbyterian Church at 10 Bayview Drive, San Rafael, where he has been pastor since 1963. Before that, he was pastor of two other California churches. And previous to that, he had careers in the import-export business, and as a U.S. Army counter-intelligence agent. "Why Should Unnecessary Labels Be Left In Clothing?"

Are you certain the labels are unnecessary? They may appear unsightly at times or hang loosely from a single thread, but those labels are there for a purpose, not advertising. In some cases the Government requires the label. In most instances the manufacturer puts them there for your protection. Frequently your drycleaner can determine a garment's cleanability from the manufacturer's name.

Today so many fabrics are not what they appear to be that when labels are removed from garments before they reach the drycleaner, he has no way of knowing whether or not the garment can be drycleaned safely. In drycleaning a garment may stiffen, become tacky or the color may bleed or a printed design may fade away.

You should install a "Save The Label" campaign for your garments. You'll enjoy them longer, the garments and the labels.

WIFE CARLA, a medical secretary, joins Rev. Henry Kent in a critique of some of his high-contrast photographs taken in Mendocino County. For the past two summers the Presbyterian minister has taken courses at the Mendocino Art Center in high-contrast photography, an intricate process of enlarging and printing that eliminates the gray tones and leaves only the stark black and white. The results look very much like woodcuts. Reverend Kent used to take movies, and still makes slide travelogues whenever he travels. He set up his own darkroom in his home at 124 Rollingwood Drive, San Rafael, and finds that phase of photography as challenging and satisfying as the taking of the pictures. "You can," he says, "create a composition and an image that may not have been in the original photograph."

acquaintances placed on such things as humility and love and helping with the needs of others. "They demonstrated to me just how much more important it was to give than to receive."

One of the persons he met at Marble Collegiate was a girl named Carla Rozelaar, like Kent a native of Holland. She was later to become Mrs. Kent.

Inspired by the lessons he had learned from the Peale church and its people, Henry Kent decided he would spend the rest of his life sharing those discoveries and truths with others.

HIS BUSINESS career, however, caused him to leave New York for California to open a new office in Los Angeles for another import and export house.

"I found I missed my fellowship group in New York and that there was now something vital missing from my life," he says. He decided to fill that void by studying theology.

But before he could enroll in a seminary, he had to earn the necessary college credits for admission. He attended the University of California at Los Angeles for a year and earned a bachelor of arts degree in history.

THEN THE next three years were spent at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

He and Carla were married in 1947. And in 1950 he left the seminary, now a Presbyterian minister.

In the summer he had served as pastor of a small church at Fulton near Santa Rosa. "It doesn't exist anymore," he says of his first church. "It was demolished, and how there is a road running through where it once stood."

From Fulton he went to Santa Rosa as student assistant at the Presbyterian Church.

WITH THE completion of his schooling, he was invited to become pastor of the church in Paramount in Southern California, and it was there, on July 23, 1950, that he was formally ordained a minister by Rev. Norman Vincent Peale.

He remained in Paramount for two years, then moved to West Covina and its Community Presbyterian Church. "It was a very small church. There were about 8,000 people living in West Covina and the church had less than 100 members."

He stayed there from 1952 to 1963, and the area grew tremendously to a population of 60,000. So did the congregation. And a beautiful new church with sanctuary and education facilities was erected. Reverend Kent dedicated the building in 1962.

"YOU KNOW," he says, "most of the pictures in my scrapbook show me with a shovel in hand, taking part in a groundbreaking of some kind."

Henry Kent was then called to Marin and to San Rafael to become pastor of the newly organized St. Luke Presbyterian Church whose small congregation held property on a beautiful knoll at Bayside Acres.

There, in 1965, St. Luke built its house of worship where Reverend Kent presides today over a growing, active congregation.

LAST YEAR he served as moderator for the Presbytery of the Redwoods, the district assembly of ministers and elders. And he serves San Francisco Theological Seminary as field supervisor.

He is a member of the San Rafael Rotary Club, too, and active in mental health work.

But the greatest claimant upon his time and energies except for pastorate and family, is the American Red Cross, particularly right now, with March being observed as Red Cross Month.

HIS INVOLVEMENT in Red Cross began in 1952 while in Paramount when he served as fund drive chairman for the chapter there. But he says his interest in the organization dates back to the war years "when I saw those Red Cross girls right up there in the front lines, distributing coffee, doughnuts and kindness to the servicemen."

In West Covina he served on the board of the East San Gabriel Valley Chapter, and when he came to San Rafael, he joined the Marin chapter's board in 1964.

Before becoming chapter chairman, he served on a number of its key committees, and on the Red Cross Bay Area Council. In 1968 he attended the national Red Cross convention in Denver.

THE RED CROSS, he says, "is an absolutely essential organization."

Since 1964, Henry Kent has been attending the Esalen Institute, a Big Sur-based institution for the exploration of ideas in philosophy, psychology and religion. He has pioneered in the encounter group movement and in sensitivity and awareness training.

He has great physical energy as well as mental acuity, and this leads him into such undertakings as the construction of his own high fidelity set, a trip with his family last summer down the Klamath River on a rubber raft, and a four-weeks voyage this winter as chaplain on board a Holland-America Line passenger ship.

HE SET UP his own photography darkroom.

Of living in Marin, he says: "Ever since I spent those three years at the seminary in San Anselmo I had hoped to be able to return to Marin County.

WITH EVER-PRESENT pipe in hand, his dog on a leash and papers under his arm, Rev. Henry Kent reports for duty at the headquarters of the Marin County Chapter of the American Red Cross. As chairman of the chapter, Reverend Kent has been especially busy during Red Cross Month being observed in March.

"It has a beauty all its own. And I don't know of any place in the world with a more benign climate. I think Marin is an ideal place to live, with the beaches, the forest, the mountains so close by.

"YOU DON'T EVEN have to go to the city to hear good music. We have our own symphony orchestra and fine chamber groups. And recently I enjoyed the San Francisco Symphony concert at Terra Linda High School."

The packed house for that last event, he feels, demonstrates the great need for a more adequate auditorium in Marin County "that would be a great boost to our cultural life."

He enjoys hikes in the hills behind Glenwood, not far from his home and church. "It's a steep climb, but worth it. You get the most magnificent scenery."

OF TODAY'S "now" generation of teen-agers, the minister says: "I feel we are seeing and hearing expressions on their part that they are fed up with the duplicity and the dishonesty of our society.

"This doesn't mean I agree with the use of drugs or the complete unwillingness to do any work on the part of some of them. I still think we have to have discipline.

"Yet, on the other hand, they are right in some of the things that they affirm. There are more important things in life than making a lot of money.

"I'M NOT AS alarmed about these young people as many persons are. It seems to me that the emphasis must be on understanding between the generations, rather than upon trying to tell our teen-agers what they must or should do.

"Communication and understandings are our most hopeful answers."

And does he have any personal motto that he might suggest for others to help see them through rough times?

REACHING BACK, perhaps to that eventful period when he spent so much time with the Marble Collegiate Church group that was to so greatly effect his future, he replies without hesitation:

"A person can learn and find meaning in even the most difficult moments."

Teacher And Thespian, Lou Enjoys Both Roles

Drake High Drama Instructor Also Acts On The San Francisco Stage

Louis R. Casazza of Petaluma is one of those rare educators schools are always looking for but too seldom find — a teacher who is also a doer.

Casazza, in his third year as drama teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo, also is an active thespian and one of the principal players in "The World of Arthur Hoppe," which opened this week at the Wharf Theater, 107 Jefferson Street, San Francisco.

"THIS IS THE ultimate for a drama teacher," he says. "You know, art teachers should paint; teachers of English should write. I'm acting in what should be a smash hit."

The production, based on the writings of San Francisco columnist and Marin resident Art Hoppe, is the brain child of an old college friend of Casazza, Dennis Percy of Mill Valley.

"I owe a lot to Dennis," Lou Casazza says. "First, I met my wife, Beryl, through him. She was just over from England and living with his brother Mike's family in Mill Valley. He introduced us at a Christmas party there.

"NOW, HE'S GIVEN me the opportunity to play the narrator in the Hoppe play. It's a dream part, literally. I don't necessarily go along with the spirit of everything Hoppe has to say — although I've been a fan of his for years — but it's all good theater."

How does the working-teacher-working-actor find time for all his activities and still be a family man? (The Casazzas have two children, Louis R. Jr., 6, and Juliet, 5.)

"You find time, and you make sacrifices," says the 36-year-old Casazza. "And besides, I'm used to wearing two hats. When I went to school I was always working, too, or in some amateur production.

"I GREW UP IN the Mission District of San Francisco, in a tough neighborhood. The big dream then was to some day move out to the Richmond District, honestly. We didn't make that, but when I was in high school at Sacred Heart we did make it into a Doelger home. "It was heaven."

Casazza went to University of San Francisco on a baseball scholarship, dropped out after a couple of years, and soon found himself playing the role of soldier in Korea. After the service he returned to USF to complete his undergraduate and graduate studies.

THE ACTOR-TEACHER first taught for five years at Sacred Heart High School, his alma mater. Saratoga High School was next for a year. When Casazza landed a job at Drake ("Better than a Doelger home or even The Richmond.") he moved his pretty blonde English wife and their children to Strawberry.

"Now we've been in Petaluma for a year. It's just great for the kids — a place to play. Oh, we had that in Strawberry, too. . . . I just keep thinking of my own rough childhood. . . .

"You know, going into San Francisco every night now seems strange — as if I don't belong any more. Of course, I do. It's part of my makeup — relax, I caught the pun, too — it's . . .well, see the play."

BUT WHAT ABOUT the family life?

"OK, my day away from home now runs from about 7:30 in the morning to about midnight. When we were first married it was tough on Beryl, my having to be away for rehearsals and all. But I do have days-off.

"Now she understands — she is teaching too, ballet for the Petaluma Recreation Department.

"And I have no intention of giving up teaching. I consider teaching the most satisfying work I've ever done. Acting is an extension of it."

NOT ONLY IS Louis R. Casazza a drama teacher and an actor, but he is also a family man. Here he enjoyed a romp with his two children, son Louis Jr. and daughter Juliet.

As for sacrifices, Casazza says: "Sure, we're passing some things up. We have been planning for years to visit Beryl's family in Newcastle — yes, we'll go without coals — and this year we even had the tickets purchased. It was a struggle, believe me.

"BUT A PLAY like this comes along only once in a lifetime. We'll get to Europe yet."

What did Mrs. Casazza say when informed by her husband that the play's the thing?

"Super!"

HAROLD GREGG is a lover of the outdoors, but his work as president of the Marin Conservation League keeps him indoors a great deal of time. The 15-foot-long desk in the study of his Forest Knolls home is crowded with papers and files pertaining to conservation causes. Gregg devotes his full time to the non-salaried job, and finds it growing more complex and challenging with the passing of each year. (Photos by Lewis Stewart)

Harold Gregg Gives All His Time To Conservation Cause

BUT SOMETIMES, Harold Gregg, ardent outdoorsman that he is, simply has to escape the desk work and get out into the open air. Here he and his dog Tuffy enjoy a stroll along the Bolinas beach that is representative of the kind of recreational and ecological areas the Marin Conservation League is determined to preserve for posterity.

By BOB RAAB

"The county had given up. Logging on Bolinas Road, it was said, just couldn't be stopped because it was taking place on private property."

Harold Gregg was recalling just one of the challenges accepted by the Marin Conservation League, of which he is president.

"We got Fire Chief Louis Bloom and some jeeps and loaded them with Marin County supervisors. And we transported them to the scene. And what they saw up there on the Bolinas Ridge shocked them and left them fighting mad!

"COUNTY COUNSEL Doug Maloney and his assistant Joe Forest went to work. But they encountered opposition from, of all places, the state! The state claimed preemptive rights to all logging controls, and it didn't intend to do anything.

"But our lawyers didn't quit. Eventually they got a ruling from Atty. Gen. Thomas Lynch giving the counties the right to act under their powers to control a public nuisance. A court injunction halted the logging. We got their performance bond raised from a puny $5,000 to $50,000. And the litigation still goes on.

"We think it will be awhile before that kind of logging will come back to Marin County."

DESPITE A RECORD that includes victories such as that one, Gregg says Marin County conservationists are confronted with yet larger, more difficult, unsolved problems in the future.

For instance: "Strip mining is looming on the horizon in Marin. So we're gathering information for a model ordinance. Marin needs a law before strip mining is attempted — not afterwards."

Gregg lists some other subjects of pressing importance to the Marin Conservation League:

THE BOLINAS Lagoon, a natural resources ordinance, water, Richardson Bay, cooperating with Nature Conservancy in land acquisition, protection of tidal waters, protection of the coast line, the establishment of a Coast Conservation and Development Commission.

How did Gregg get involved in the Marin Conservation League and causes of this kind to the point where for the past four years it has been his full-time preoccupation?

"I figured it was my turn to get up to bat," he answers.

AND HE GOES on to explain: "I came into conservation believing that much good work had been done in Marin County. And that now it was my turn and my obligation to help with that work."

Although an ardent outdoorsman, much of Gregg's work on behalf of conservation is performed indoors. He explains:

"Conservation work is appearing at meetings before supervisors, planning agencies, city councilmen. It's attending conservation meetings and legislative hearings. It's consulting with city officials, county planners and specialists like architects, lawyers and biologists.

"AND SOMETIMES conservation work is going to court to ask for an injunction."

Developers and builder are not always the natural enemies of conservation, he insists. "Some developers want to do more than make money; they want to add something worthwhile to the community," he points out.

Currently Gregg is working with a developer on plans for a Tomales Bay project that "will be an attractive residential-public recreational area—if some modifications are made!"

GREGG DOES HIS homework. The desk in the study of his hilltop home in Forest Knolls is 15 feet long and covered with thick dockets.

Conservation requires the zeal and special skills of many people, says Gregg.

"For example, recently a situation came up at Bolinas Harbor. We had only a few hours to prepare a recommendation to the supervisors.

"I telephoned Harold Bramson-Cook and told him we needed a feasibility report on a breakwater at Bolinas in 20 minutes. Harold is a retired rear admiral and a specialist in hydrology. He phoned back right on time. His report was taped over one of my phones while the other was carrying the taping to Ruth Wilson of Mill Valley, who was making another taping.

"SHE TYPED THE report and handed it to me at roadside on Highway 101 in Greenbrae and we had a position paper for the supervisors within two hours."

The controversial Army Corps of Engineers project on Corte Madera Creek in Kentfield came up.

"The Marin Conservation League, and others, fought that battle three years ago. We lost. The opposition at construction time was too late."

This brought up the matter of ardent young conservationists like those who interposed their bodies between bulldozers and targets at Kentfield and on the Bolinas Ridge logging site and drew the criticism of some.

"IT'S JUST GREAT that so many young people are ready to battle for environment," Gregg responds. "But we've got to teach them to direct their energies effectively. Laying down in the mud isn't the solution; burying new autos isn't either.

"I tell them: 'Do your homework; put your shoes on; then go where the game is played. At supervisors' meetings, at legislative hearings, in city councils, in court—that's where you win or lose for conservation.!"

"Today," he says, "youngsters can see the damage that has been done—to atmosphere, wildlife, seashores, open space, communities. I see this too and fight it; but I also see what has been saved by conservationists

AT THE BOLINAS LAGOON, Harold Gregg, president of the Marin Conservation League, prepares for a photographic session. He will be aiming his 600-millimeter lens at some of the animal and plant life that teems in the tidepools and along the shoreline. Preservation of the lagoon has long been a point of special concern with Marin County conservationists.

HIS YEARS AS the operator of summer camps have accustomed Harold Gregg to working with young people. And as Marin Conservation League president, he has continued those contacts. Here on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield he talks to students, left to right, Gary Linebarger, Catherine West, Logan Marker (back to camera) and Bonnie Sutherland.

FOUR YEARS AGO, Harold Gregg plunged full-time into conservation work. As president of the Marin Conservation League, he is dedicated to the proposition that all Marinites, present and future generations, must have the opportunity to enjoy, as he does here and others are doing in the other pictures on these pages, the feel of a free, fresh wind whipping through their hair, and the sights and sounds of a rich ecological life thriving in its natural habitat.

of past years—Yellowstone, Yosemite, most of the redwoods, much of the Grand Canyon."

GREGG THINKS Theodore Roosevelt is something of a maligned figure today. "He may have been the best President for conservation we have ever had."

Working with youngsters has been most of Gregg's life work.

For 24 years he operated Forest Farm Summer Camp in Forest Knolls, Redwood Ranch Camp, Nicasio and Tumbleweeds, a travel camp for teens. He sold the camps and retired four years ago for the full-time and non-salaried conservation work.

Much of his busy schedule involves talks at schools. He emphasizes action on local conservation problems and gets surprising response—and results.

"WITHIN THE PAST week I've had a number of phone calls. Two were from students reporting a road crew dumping rock into Miller Creek in Lucas Valley. Another youngster reported on garbage dumping near the Meadow Club. Some phone calls were made to ask for restraint.

"A much tougher problem was a call from a girl in San Rafael who was in tears after seeing the movie 'African Safari' at San Rafael High School. I tried to console her about killing of rare species of wildlife. She said, 'The awful thing was, my father enjoyed it.' "

Gregg and his wife Frances are natives of Petaluma. He graduated from the University of California at Berkeley with a degree in architecture, and received a master's degree in art education from Columbia University.

HE AUTHORED A book on art education and supervised the subject in Sonoma County, and in New York and Delaware.

In the early 1940s Gregg worked for Mary Summers in the Marin County Planning Department. Since her retirement Mrs. Summers has been invaluable to Gregg and the Marin Conservation League in her director's role specializing in zoning and ordinance and planning procedures.

"This is the strength of our league," Gregg states. "We've got specialists who work full time for weeks on 'brush fire' problems and potential disasters, as well as positive programs for improving environment. People like Nello Kearney, parks; Frank Moncrief, finance; Emme Gilman, Bay Development Commission; Dr. Bill Uuton, Richardson Bay plans; Mary Donnelly, signs; Anne West, transit; Rene Kingsley, youth groups; Ron MacMillan, water projects; Thelma Dickson, pollution."

GREGG IS OPTIMISTIC about the future of Marin County.

"This county has civic officials and county administrators who are willing to fight for a better environment—from lawyers to councilmen to planners to supervisors. And we've got citizens who work without pay or publicity to improve and preserve. "This county is a leader and an example for others!"

But conservation work is far more complex and time-consuming than it was even four or five years ago.

"We need more people who are willing to pick up a bat and step up to the plate," says Gregg.

ENJOYING A bicycling jaunt in the invigorating air and pleasant surroundings of the San Geronimo Valley are Mr. and Mrs. Michael R. Manwaring.

AT THE RICHARDSON BAY Wildlife Sanctuary of the Audubon Society, 3-year-old Mary Ellen Scofield sights a bird and points it out to her mother, Mrs. Michael Scofield, and baby sister Elizabeth, 1. The landmark Victorian house serving as the Audubon Education Center can be seen in the background.

A HIKE ALONG THE trail that leads to Alpine Lake is enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jacques and little daughter Catie. One of the prime benefits of an unspoiled outdoors area, the Marin Conservation League believes, is the opportunity it affords for fun and learning that can be shared by all the members of the family.

SPORTSMEN HAVE one of the biggest stakes in conservation. Here Harry Pederson has cast his line out into the waters of Richardson Bay and awaits hopefully for a bite.

Plymouth Set To Celebrate

The Travel Pages

Visitors from all over the world will converge on Plymouth, Mass., in 1970 to help the historic city located 37 miles southeast of Boston celebrate the 350th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims.

The jubilee will start in midsummer and last through Dec. 21, the day in 1620 when the first arrivals from the Mayflower put foot on Plymouth Rock. It wasn't until five days later, however, that the main group from the ship came ashore to start building their new colony.

As Plymouth honors its first settlers in New England's top tourist event of the year, the fact that the original band of 102 Mayflower passengers were actually not known as the Pilgrim Fathers until two centuries after their landing is largely obscured.

AT FIRST THE Mayflower pioneers were called "Old Comers," report the travel experts of Trans World Airlines.

The permanent Jamestown Colony in Virginia had been established before them in 1607. The Spanish were well entrenched in what is now Florida and America's Southwest. French traders were regular callers along the St. Lawrence River. Montreal, for instance, was laid out as a settlement in 1611. St. Augustine in Florida was started long before that, in 1564.

Cape Cod, where Plymouth is located, was named as early as 1614 by the English explorer John Smith, but Samuel de Champlain had explored the coast in 1604, and Norsemen are now believed to have visited and lived in the area around A.D. 1000, over four centuries before Columbus is generally credited with having discovered the New World.

AS AMERICA began to expand and its population to increase, the Mayflower band became known as Forefathers, and the date of their arrival was celebrated in New England.

In 1793, during a Forefathers' Day sermon, Rev. Chandler Robbins used a quotation from William Bradford, an original Mayflower passenger, which he found copied in old church records. William Bradford served as Plymouth's governor every year except five from 1621 to 1656, having been reelected 30 times. In this quotation, Bradford referred to his fellow immigrants as "pilgrimes."

It wasn't until a quarter-of-a-century later, in 1819, that a Pilgrim Society was finally organized, dedicated to perpetuating the fame of the Forefathers. The society promoted a bicentennial celebration in 1820, with Daniel Webster as speaker. His stirring address, which was later published, began:

"We have come to this rock to record here our homage to our Pilgrim Fathers. . ."

FROM THIS TIME on the Forefathers became Pilgrim Fathers in common usage.

Plymouth got its name and its historic associations largely through accident. The Mayflower, a former wineship outfitted with 12 cannon, sailed with the Speedwell, a smaller vessel, from Southampton, England, on April 15, 1620.

About one-third of those aboard the two ships were Separatists seeking reigious tolerance from the Church of England. They had fled years before to Holland, where they had been living. Now they were ready to try for an even newer life across the Atlantic.

The others on the Mayflower and Speedwell, including Capt. Miles Standish, who was hired for his military knowledge, had been recruited in London by the Adventurers, a group of English investors who were financing the expedition in return for a split of expected profits from fishing and trading.

STORMS AND leaky bottoms twice forced the two vessels to return to port—first to Dartmouth and then to Plymouth. Finally, the Speedwell was abandoned as unseaworthy. Everyone was crowded aboard the Mayflower and it eventually sailed again, this time from Plymouth, on Sept. 16, 1620.

The Atlantic was stormy and the crossing, during which a young crewman and a servant were lost overboard and a baby boy was born to Elizabeth Hopkins at sea, took 66 days for the 90-foot-long, 26-foot-beam ship.

Today, TWA's new Boeing 747s, which are 231 feet 10 inches long, with a wing span of 195 feet eight inches, fly from the U.S. to Britain in six hours 35 minutes, carrying 342 passengers.

ORIGINALLY, THE Mayflower passengers had intended to land in the Hudson River area, then part of the Domain of Virginia. The bad weather, though, forced them to put ashore at what is now Provincetown, at the tip of Cape Cod.

They arrived there on Nov. 21, but the leaders, after looking around, decided that the sand dunes and desolate brush were too barren for settlement.

Lifting anchor, they sailed on along the cape coast, finally reaching the bay where things looked better. They called their settlement Plymouth, after the port from which they had eventually departed through misfortune.

The storied Plymouth Rock, upon which they first stepped ashore, now rests on its original waterfront site under a protecting granite cover. Nearby is a replica of the Mayflower. Both will be great attractions this year as Plymouth celebrates.

THE MAYFLOWER II is an exact copy of the original vessel, which returned to England after landing its passengers in 1620 and eventually disappeared from records. Designed by an American and built in Britain, the replica was sailed to Plymouth in 1957, traveling the 5,400 nautical miles with a crew of 33 men in 53 days.

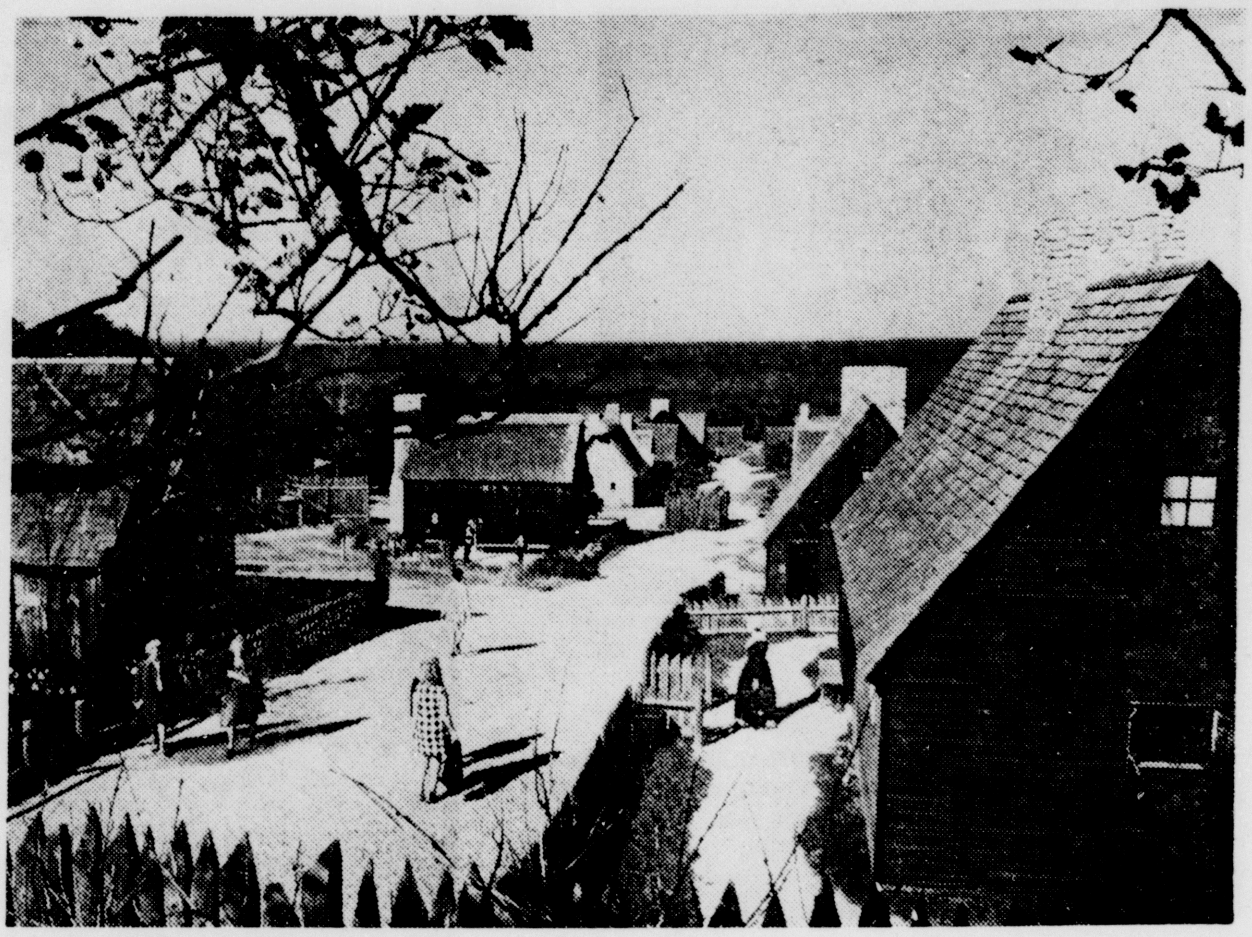
Along with the six months of special events scheduled for this year's 350th anniversary celebration, visitors to Plymouth will be able to enjoy many other historic associations with the spot where the Pilgrims first set foot ashore in America.

Rising behind Plymouth Rock is Cole's Hill, where, during their first terrible winter, the Pilgrims buried half their number. In the spring they leveled the ground and sowed it with grain to keep the Indians from learning how many had died.

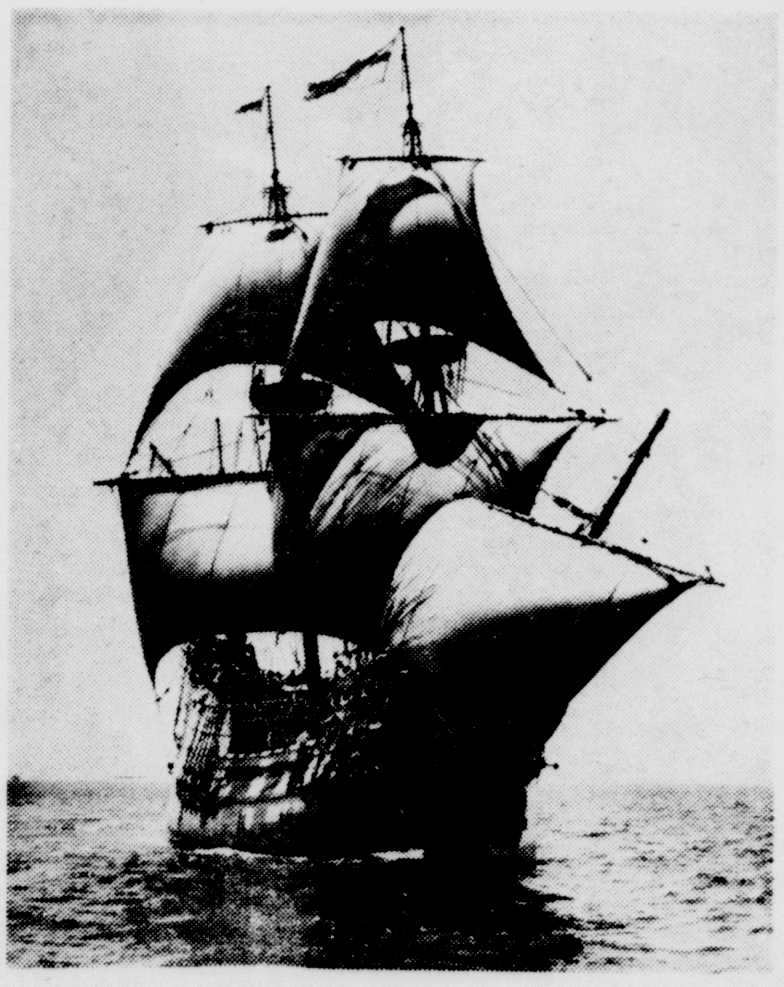
MANY SURVIVING original records of the colony are now in Plymouth's old Registry Building.

Plimouth Plantation, a recreated village two-and-a-half miles from the site of the first settlement, features a dozen houses, an old meeting hall, herb gardens and an Indian camp. Movies depicting the Pilgrims' first year are shown, and visitors can sample food of the time.

In Plymouth itself there are a number of fascinating old churches and houses, all of them open for inspection. One is the Harlow Old Fort House, dating back to 1677, which was erected from the timbers of the Pilgrims' original fort. Another is an 18th Century dwelling that shows how a Plymouth family lived and grew over the span of a century.



PLIMOUTH PLANTATION, a couple of miles south of Plymouth Rock, is a full-scale recreation of the village established by the Pilgrims, as it appeared in 1627. In authentic surroundings, guides and hostesses, in Pilgrim dress and steeped in Pilgrim lore, carry on the tasks necessary for living in a 17th Century farming community.



MAYFLOWER II, a reproduction of the original Mayflower, is berthed near Plymouth Rock. Exhibits on board show what life was like during the 66-day trip on the vessel crowded with 102 passengers, 25 crew members and all the supplies necessary for the voyage and for starting the new colony.

The Soviet Open Their Back Door To The Americans

New Adventure Tours Start From Alaska, Visit Siberia

By NORMA SPRING

Exploration of Siberia Russia via the new Alaska gateway must be one of the most intriguing travel adventures of the year!

All the way from Anchorage, this new westward movement for tourists backtracks on the routes used by explorers and colonizers of Alaska 200 years ago. It was known as "Russian America" long before its purchase by the United States in 1867.

Alaska Airlines' Golden Nugget charter flights will fly over the same chain of Aleutian Islands among which the Russians once fought the treacherous Bering Sea in little handhewn sailboats.

PERMISSION was granted recently by the Russian and American authorities for Alaska Airlines to take 10 charter tour groups to the USSR via the "back door," Siberia. The airline offers a choice of either an eight-day "Siberian Exploration Tour" or 15-day "Russia and Siberia Comprehensive Tour" of the many faces of the USSR.

During the tour's 3,800 mile flight from Anchorage to Siberia, the mood is set with the new "Golden Samovar Service."

Stewardesses in Russian tunics serve fine Russian foods and dispense the very special ambrosia "Bolshoi Golden Troika" from gleaming samovars, the treasured tea urn symbolic of gracious living in fine Soviet homes.

A HIGHLIGHT of the eight-hour flight will be crossing the International Dateline. The charters will land at Khabarovak, Siberia. There, Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, and Intourist, which handles all tourism in the USSR, join Alaska Airlines in showing guests the best of Russia.

The eight-day tour includes the Siberian cities of Khabarovsk, Irkutsk, Bratsk, and Lake Baikal.

Today's Siberia is a far cry from the bleak land of exile under the stars. It is Russia's vigorous, far east frontier, with extensive virgin timber stands and barely-tapped natural resources, including hydroelectric power on a grand scale.

THIS PRISTINE, pioneer land is amazingly like Alaska, and so are its friendly people. In summer, the countryside flourishes with lakes, streams, flowers, and prolific bird and animal life.

Khabarovsk, on the Amur River, is a transportation center and main eastern depot for the Trans-Siberian Railroad. A growing giant of 400,000 people, this modern city emerging from the surrounding heavy forest, or taiga, is a fine introduction to frontier Russia.

From Khabarovsk, a modern Aeroflot jet penetrates deep into the heart of wilderness Siberia. Much of the way to Irkutsk skirts the border of Mongolia.

HOPEFULLY, there'll be a glimpse of the legendary Chinese Wall, now 1,200 years old.

Irkutsk, on the Angara River, is one of the oldest cities in Siberia, at the crossroads of trade routes to European Russia and the Far East. During the 18th Century, explorers and merchants exchanged supplies here before making the long trek on foot or by sled across Siberia eastward to the ocean where they built small ships of green lumber and set sail for Alaska.

Included in both itineraries is a day's trip to nearby Lake Baikal, deepest in the world, and supporting extraordinary aquatic life.

When the Bratsk Dam, an hour's flight from Irkutsk, was started a dozen years ago on the Angara River, the first builders hiked over animal paths through thick forests.

THE CITY OF Bratsk is made up of several communities surrounding the industrial complexes dependent on this world's largest hydroelectric development. Homes, in the midst of primeval forest, are surrounded by flowers in summer. The new Bratsk "sea" created by the dam is much a part of everyone's life and recreation.

The 15-day tour includes, besides the Siberian frontier, two entirely different faces of Russia.

One is the fascinating European face, as found in Moscow and the optional tour cities: ancient Kiev and 18th Century St. Petersburg (now Leningrad). Here has been preserved much of the old and the beautiful.

Tour highlights in Moscow include a complete tour of the Kremlin: the Armory, fantastic St. Basil's Cathedral and Lenin's Tomb. Four or five days are spent getting acquainted with this exciting capital and its people.

THE EXOTIC AND Oriental face, sampled in visits to Samarkand and Tashkent, is a photographer's Central Asia "cup of tea," with graceful, colorful, domed architecture, assorted national dress, old ruins, Tamerlane's tomb, an occasional camel caravan, and native markets.

Both cities, in warm, desert-like country, are at the crossroads of centuries of traffic and history.

For the time allotted, just about everything possible has been crammed into these adventuresome charter tours, based on taking a new direction for a new look at the USSR, which is magnificent both in scope and variety. This largest country in the world covers one-sixth of the earth's land surface, and embraces 11 time zones.

THE EIGHT-DAY tour costs $849, with departure dates of June 20, July 25, Aug. 29 and Sept. 16.

The 15-day tour costs $1,249, with departure dates: June 6, June 27, July 11, Aug. 1, Aug. 15 and Sept. 5. Both are priced from Anchorage, are "all-inclusive," deluxe, and escorted by an American guide as well as Intourist.

For further information on these tours, see your travel agent or write Alaska Airlines, Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, Seattle, Wash., 98158, for a brochure.

MOSCOW'S RED SQUARE, dominated at its far end by St. Basil's Cathedral, just outside the Kremlin Walls, is a colorful and fascinating architectural conglomerate reflecting Russia's varied heritage. The cathedral, built by Ivan the Terrible in the 16th Century, is now a museum. People in the distance are lined up to see Lenin's Tomb at right. Americans can now see Siberian sights before continuing on to Moscow and European Russia, thanks to new Alaska Airlines tours. (Photo by Bert Hemphill)

Feared Fighters Of The Wild, Wild East

THE COSSACKS by Philip Longworth; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 409 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

This is a history of the wild, wild east — east of the Dniester River and south of Muscovy.

The Cossacks became an entity in the 16th Century when Slavic serfs fled from Poland and Muscovy south to the uninhabited steppes north of the Caspian Sea. Soon they evolved from fugitives into several loosely organized entities: principally the Don and Zaparozhian Cossacks.

They did not sow, nor did they reap. Most early Cossacks plundered Khanate merchant men on the Black Sea, pirated rivercraft on the Volga and Don rivers, and robbed rich caravans returning from the Orient. Their loot was barter for staples, cloth and weaponry.

Often the Cossacks hired out to Muscovy, Poland and other nations as mercenary troops. Life was cheap to a Cossack. He was often cruel, always courageous and hardy. His fighting qualities were feared from Persia to Sweden.

The first exploration of Siberia was made by a Cossack with only one name recorded — Yermak. His and other explorations by Cossacks went 4,000 miles across the continent to Kamchatka before 1600.

By mid 18th Century the Cossacks were strong enough to fight nations. They fought and defeated Poland temporarily . . . driving the Poles out of the Ukraine. But the Cossacks did not have the economic viability to sustain military victory. Soon they were arranging a treaty with hated Muscovy to protect themselves from Poland.

Tsar Peter the Great developed what is now essentially modern Russia. He expanded Muscovy's boundaries southward into Cossack territory and the Cossacks couldn't stop him. Not all of them wanted to. By this time an aristocracy had burgeoned, towns had been built and a system of government formalized.

Several fierce revolutions followed as the Russians repressed the Cossacks. But the force of history moved the Cossacks to the side of the tsar. Cossack troops dealt fiercely with the Russian people in Moscow and other cities before World War I. Lenin went about trying to crush them after the revolution because rugged individualism and Bolshevism did not square. World War II brought an end to the Cossacks as an entity.

Many fought for Hitler because of their fierce hatred of Communism. They were finally crushed and many fled Russia.

British historian Philip Longworth has put together a highly readable account of a people and an era little-known to us — the first such full treatment in the English language.

Those Who Came To California By Way Of Mexico

THE EL DORADO TRAIL by Ferol Egan; McGraw-Hill, 282 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Reviews Of New Reading

McGraw-Hill's "American Trails Series" has turned into a varied collection of volumes, from the initial one on the Natchez Trace to Dan Cushman's "Great North Trail" which attempted to trace the route of prehistoric man over the northern land bridge from Asia and south through America.

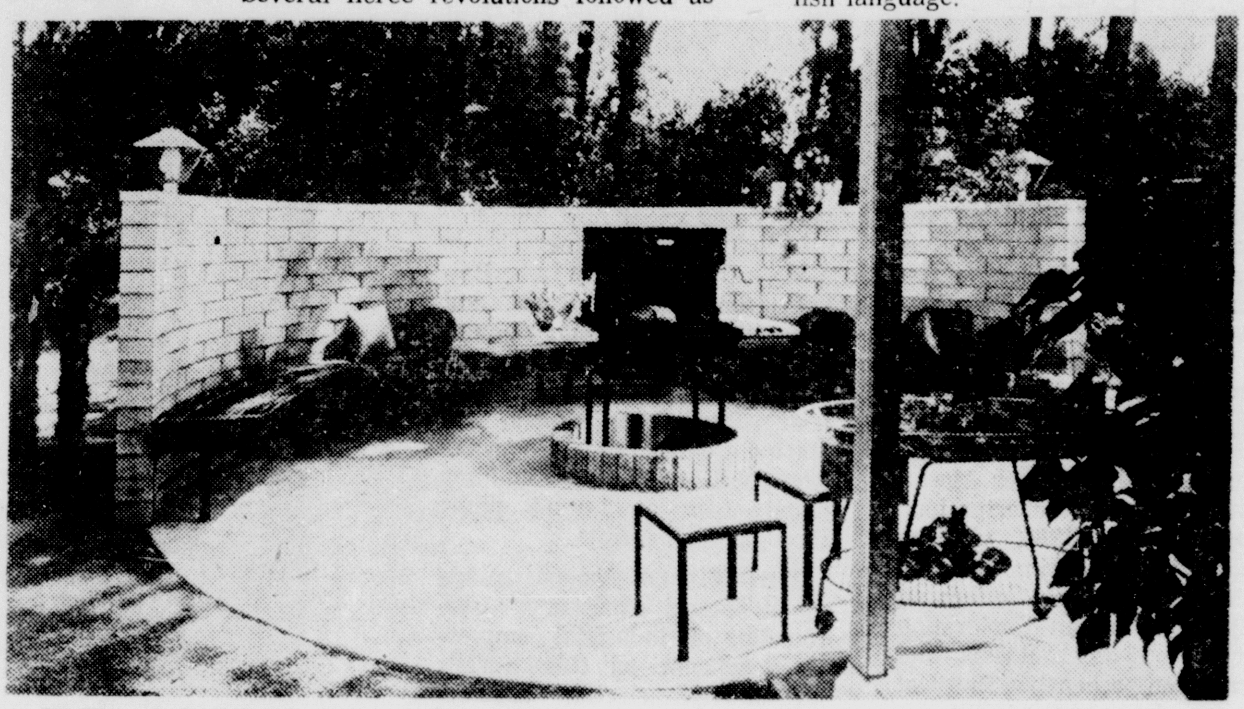
"The El Dorado Trail" is the second in the series dealing with routes taken by the westering horde in the California gold rush, the first having been George R. Stewart's "The California Trail," describing the migration over plains, Rockies, Great Basin and Sierra.

Ferol Egan tells the story of those who headed for California via Mexico. That route had no trail bearing any name—and in fact consisted of quite a few different routes to get from the gulf to the Pacific. So Egan has lumped them all together as "The El Dorado Trail."

He has done a good job. And he has struck his gold in a little-mined bonanza.

For, while the overland migration has been "written to death," that via steamer to Mexico and overland through that country (which had just been defeated in war by the United States) has had little publicity.

"The El Dorado Trail" follows an assortment of argonauts over routes that added the hazards of bandits to those of difficult terrain and the feared Apache and Comanche raiders. There is plenty of excitement along with history on "The El Dorado Trail."



A CIRCULAR PATIO of concrete, framed by a brick wall and with background plantings, makes a cozy spot for the outdoor entertaining of small groups. It is included among the illustrations in the new Jack Kramer book, "The Complete Book of Patio Gardening," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

PLANS AND PLANTINGS

Enhancing Our Outdoor Living

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF PATIO GARDENING by Jack Kramer; Putnam, 192 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

California more than any other place is patio country. So the veteran gardening and landscaping writer Jack Kramer should have a ready audience here for his newest book.

Kramer devotes the first half of his book to patio design and construction, going into such subjects as types of floors, lighting, pool installation, etc.

The second half of the book takes up plantings with more than 200 different suggested species and their particular qualities and uses discussed.

The book is generously illustrated, although there is no color.

And Kramer does have a geography problem in trying to write for the whole country. But he is in fact a Marinite (Mill Valley) and so his book is especially useful to Californians. Many of the photos are local.

Unflattering Appraisal Of The G-Men

HOOVER'S FBI by William W. Turner; Sherbourne Press, 352 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Mill Valley's William W. Turner once carried the badge of a "G-Man," but he does not share the reverence for John Edgar Hoover and all that he represents which is notable in the Society of Former Special Agents, the FBI's "alumni."

"Hoover's FBI" describes Turner's own experiences in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, then becomes more interesting as he dissects the methods and personality of the man who has headed the FBI since it was the Justice Department's Division of Investigation while Calvin Coolidge was President. In a third part, he discusses the organization itself and the danger of its becoming (if it is not already) a national secret police.

Hoover, as seen by Turner, emerges as a man who is both an organizational genius and a petty-minded despot. The petty-mindedness is substantiated by accounts of many of Hoover's actions against his own agents, as well as against anyone who dared to suggest that his FBI was other than the perfect crime-control agency.

The theme of much of Turner's volume is that the FBI, despite its ever-widening scope of authority, has never been the nemesis of crime that the man who heads is pretends it is—and that most of the public thinks it is. Organized crime, he points out, has grown and flourished at the same time the bureau has grown and flourished.

"For nearly four decades, he (Hoover) stuck his head in the sand while the crime syndicates, plainly a federal problem, waxed fat," charges Turner.

He sees deep dangers in entrusting the FBI with the role of combatting foreign espionage, and finds it sadly miscast in its chore of investigating civil rights violations.

"Hoover's FBI" is a telling criticism of the overblown bureau, with its "cult of personality" developed by 46 years under a single head. Some of the damaging material—suppression of evidence, pettiness in administration, etc. — is backed up by documentation.

Some accounts, however, seem to have been so carelessly researched that it is hard to accept the indictment en toto.

It is, for instance, difficult to accept as completely authoritative a book that speaks of the "Wild Wobblies of the '30s" (when the IWW was long past its days of free speech rallies, sabotage, or even strikes): of a series of "Soviet Arks" Hoover "at the pier to see the first one off" (there was never but one); who calls Alvin (Old Creepy) Karpis "Kreepy Karpis" and turns Roger Tuohy into "Roger Toughey," among other slips.

But it is not necessary to buy "Hoover's FBI" in the whole to agree with the author's contention that the FBI is less great than it pretends; that it has been too long under one man; that it has been given powers it does not know how to use, and that it uses some of them to the detriment of true order and justice.

Exercise In Futility And Stupidity

By DON KEOWN

War brings out the heroism in some men and the brutality in others.

It also sometimes brings out man's stupidity.

Just about every American knows that Joseph Kennedy Jr., oldest son of Joseph Sr. and Rose Kennedy, died a hero's death in World War II as a Navy flyer. But the details of the mission in which he met his death have remained so shrouded in secrecy that not even the Kennedy family has been fully informed. The reason was the old military reflex to cover up its mistakes.

For Joseph Kennedy Jr.—and others—died as part of a project that was one big series of blunders and which ultimately proved both costy and futile.

Jack Olsen, World War II OSS veteran, author and a senior editor of Sports Illustrated, removed the wraps from that secret program in his book "Aphrodite: Desperate Mission." It was not only a desperate mission, but a tragic one.

It was hurriedly designed to save London—and possibly New York—from what Allied intelligence believed to be a new weapon, probably long-range rockets, the Germans were preparing for launching from near-impregnable installations along the French coast.

The plan, as conceived by Maj. Henry James Rand, later of Rand Development Co. fame, and promoted by Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, called for antiquated B-17 bombers to be crammed with tons of high explosive and then lifted into the skies from English air fields. The two men on board those bombers would set the explosive devices and then parachute to the ground, after which the crews of "mother planes" in flight nearby would take over remote control of the B-17s and guide them across the channel to a crash landing into the German rocket nests.

The difficulty was that the electronic control equipment of the time was extremely primitive.

And there was other trouble—with faulty parachutes, with overloading, with English anti-aircraft gunners who blasted away at the American planes, with the weather and with the Germans.

Mission after mission ended in failure.

Even when the Navy took over from the Army "pioneers" with more sophisticated equipment, there was no success. It was on one of these missions that Joe Kennedy Jr. and his companion, Lt. Wilford John (Bud) Willy, died. Their PB4Y robot blew up while they were still on board.

An alert electronics officer, Earl Olsen, had warned officers in charge that the crude instrument for "arming" the explosives was defective and dangerous. But his frantic appeals were ignored in one of the worst of the many Mission Aphrodite blunders. "The whole thing is contrary to the simplest electrical laws," said the expert who investigated later.

Eventually, it was Allied ground forces who took the German installations that had been the Aphrodite targets. And then, in an ultimate and bitter chunk of irony, it was learned that the sites, rather than being the beehives of German rocketry activity they had been pictured, had been abandoned months before.

Early, routine bombings by Allied aircraft apparently had been far more effective than supposed and had forced the rocketry programs from these locations. The Germans then had used them only as fakes to lure Allied bombers into their guns.

Even then, Mission Aphrodite was not abandoned. There were attempts to use the drones against German submarine pens and other targets. These, too, failed.

There was even a grandiose and bloody plan to devastate German cities with Aphrodite robots, but this was abandoned for fear the Germans might retaliate with their own war-weary and expendable bombers.

President Harry S. Truman finally drew the curtain on the ill-fated program, confident that he had in the new atom bomb a more terrible weapon that would work.

Jack Olsen talked to all known survivors of Mission Aphrodite before writing his book, and apparently found them remarkably candid. He was given access, too, to previously restricted governmental files. And he has written his story interestingly and with considerable perception, although he seems to have dealt rather leniently with the error-prone planners and directors of the mission.

It is worth noting that he found unanimous agreement among the men who knew and worked with Joe Kennedy Jr. that he was, indeed, an extraordinary young man. Indeed, it seems that this remarkable family that produced one son who became a U.S. President and two others mentioned seriously for that highest office might have had in the fourth brother a man of even higher caliber and a more brilliant future.

No wonder, then, that the military was so anxious that the politically powerful Joe Kennedy Sr. not be given the full truth as to how his favorite son had died—bravely, but futilely, and unnecessarily. He was part of the price that humanity pays too often for the stupidity of its "high brass' in time of war, which, in itself, is the extreme example of mankind's thick-headed irrationality.

JOSEPH KENNEDY JR.
"I've found a man who is quite a man," wrote Lt. Earl Olsen to his wife. "I wish I could model myself after him." — from Jack Olsen's "Aphrodite: Desperate Mission."

Sleuths & Suspense

SHE WAS ONLY THE SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER by Stanton Forbes; Doubleday, 168 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

This is a delightfully different mystery; instead of being set amidst the London fogs so dear to the hearts of the writers of thrillers, this one takes place in a tiny Texas town.

Although Yarrowville is fictional, the Texas twang comes through loud and clear in the story told by 16-year-old Patsy Gates, daughter of the sheriff, who says her role is worse than being a minister's kid.

Patsy's life may seem dull to her but any girl whose grandmother lives in Cell 13 because she's mad at the government and who starts her day by delivering breakfast to a drunken rodeo rider, can't be bored to death.

Patsy and grandma, whose name is Gracie-Ellen, stumble upon two dreadful murders in the second chapter, and then things really pick up.

Naturally, Patsy decides to discover for herself who the murderer is, and naturally, her plan for trapping him works almost too well.

The fun part of the story, however, is the "Texas talk" and the portrayal of a teen-ager who collects Simon and Garfunkel records and reads "Candy," but who lives in a back-water far from the cities and suburbs.

This little story should be especially entertaining to anyone who has spent time in Texas or lived in a small town.

Books For The Juniors

A timely and especially charming little book for the very small ones is "Spring Comes to the Forest" (Doubleday. $1.95) with story by Karen Gunthorp and illustrations by Attilio Cassinelli.

Part of the A-Little-Animal-Book series, it tells of the awakening of the woods and its inhabitants after the winter's sleep. The forest creatures take up their spring housecleaning and gardening chores.

There are bears, hedgehogs, beavers, birds and a variety of fetching characters to captivate the youngsters. And the simplicity of the colorful Cassinelli artwork, done in circles and straight lines, has an unfailing appeal for little eyes.

It's a strong candidate for "favorite book" status with any tyke.

Part of the same series, from the same publisher and at the same price, and done by the same writer and artist, is "Curious Maggie," a rollicking account of an inquisitive duckling who ventures beyond the farmyard in her efforts to satisfy her curiosity about the outside world. Adventures follow— and a lesson about parental obedience. Illustrations follow the same appealing pattern as in "Spring Comes to the Forest."

"Noisy Nancy and Nick" (Doubleday, $3.95) by LouAnn Gaeddert is a rollicking account for 8-year-olds and younger of a city youngster introducing to a newcomer from a small town the delights and excitement of urban life. Children should have little trouble identifying with livewires Nancy and Nick, as they move about at a fast pace. Gioia Falmmenghi's illustrations are filled with good humor, making a subtle, restrained but effective use of color.

"The Inspector" (Doubleday, $3.95) is definitely different. George Mendoza and Peter Parnall have concocted a story without words, telling entirely in pictures the whimsical tale of a police inspector and hound trailing some mysterious and evidently mammoth creature. "Unabashedly lacking in message or moral," says the jacket of the book. Perhaps for some older juniors and their elders with an appreciation for this kind of humor.

"From Generations to Generation" (Natural History Press, $3.95) is the story of reproduction told in collaboration by three teachers — John Gabriel Navarra, Joseph S. Weisberg and Frank M. Mele. For grades five through seven, they explain the mysteries and the magic of human birth, from both scientific and social points-of-view. The book is amply illustrated, and rates as a sound, nonsensationalized text for school or home.

"Up From the Ghetto" (Cowles, $5.95) is a collection by Phillip T. Drotning and Wesley South of brief biographies of black Americans who have overcome handicaps to attain outstanding success. Its aim is to provide inspiration and guidance for today's young blacks confronted by similar obstacles. The authors tell their stories well. And to their credit, they have not limited their selections to sports and show business where the Negro has been most successful, but have included politicians, business men, educators, poets, civil rights leaders, etc. An excellent project, providing whites do not use the examples of these who have made it to justify the obstacles they have built and are building in the paths of other blacks. Not everyone is equipped to climb a mountain before beginning his trip.

"What Makes a Telephone Work?" (Little, Brown, $2.95) by Len Darwin attempts a simple explanation of an instrument children see constantly and use frequently — the telephone — but which cannot help but puzzle them with its seemingly magic ability to transmit sound. With drawings and charts, Darwin explains the principles of sound and its communication, beginning with that cherished memory from many a childhood, the tin can and string phone in the backyard. Excellent for the 9 and 10-year-old level.

With the hope of capturing the interest of the more mature young readers, critic and writer John Simon has assembled "Fourteen For Now: A Collection of Contemporary Stories" (Harper, $4.95). All the short stories were written since World War II, and all deal with modern-day problems and conditions. The list of writers includes the likes of Flannery O'Connor, Bernard Malamud, Heinrich Boll, Jane Bowles and Marin's own Gina Berriault. To each story Simon attaches his own perceptive critical comments. He has also written a splendid introduction for this book of exceptional merit.

There is nothing of the Horatio Alger about the young "hero" of "Ox: The Story of a Kid at the Top" (Little, Brown, $4.95). Ox Olmstead is a rich kid who lives in Palm Springs, but he is far from happy about his lot. "I'm supposed to be the kid at the top, and if I felt that lousy, how do the kids at the bottom feel?" wonders Ox. Things liven up when Ox ,takes a trip that begins as a short helicopter hop and lengthens into a swinging odyssey. Certainly, John Ney has written in what is described as "his first book for children" a different kind of story for juniors. In fact, one wonders if it is really for children. But it is funny and original.

For the young boy or girl seriously interested in classical music, Victor Seroff has put together "Men Who Made Musical History" (Funk & Wagnalls, $5.95). It is a collection of biographies of nine great composers — Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Weber, Schubert and Brahms. Seroff is a much respected musician and musical scholar, and his "life stories" of the masters are absolutely knowledgeable. Unfortunately, his narration seems a bit stiff and formalized for many in the age group for which he is writing.

Credit Laura Kerr with a knack for choosing original and varied subjects for her biographies for young readers. Credit her, too, with the ability to make those subjects interesting and meaningful. To earlier books on Louisa (Mrs. John Quincy) Adams and Fanny Kemble she has now added "Wonder of His World: Charles Willson Peale" (Funk & Wagnalls, $3.95). It directs light upon a man who was not only a great American painter, but also a major inventor and scientist, and a generous, humble spirit.

Oriental Cuisine For Westerners

HOW TO COOK AND EAT IN CHINESE by Buwei Yang Chao; Random House, 249 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

BUWEI YANG CHAO
The doctor cooks

This is a third, enlarged and updated edition of a book that first appeared in 1945, and which is regarded by many as the definitive work on Oriental cuisine for westerners.

Mrs. Chao, China-born Californian, is a doctor of medicine by profession. And she approaches her cooking with all the dedication of the physician.

And in the newest edition of her successful cookbook, she has resisted pressure to include some of the fancier, more exotic Chinese dishes. Instead, she has stuck with those recipes which she feels will best appeal to western tastes, and which are most practical for western kitchens.

The changes are mainly those that keep up with culinary advances — the greater use of the freezer, the wider availability of certain Chinese ingredients, etc.

Otherwise the book is substantially the same at the earlier versions, described by Book Week as "a gold mine of ideas" and by Clementine Paddleford as "no ordinary volume . . . you sit there with your mouth watering."

With considerable wit and style Mrs. Chao, with the aid of her daughter and husband, provides a sweeping survey of Chinese cookery that brings out its endless variety and its special opportunities for kitchen creativity. More than a collection of recipes, the book also discusses kitchen techniques, supplies, menus, wines, dieting, history, traditions, etc.

There is even some discussion of restaurants and that proven bit of advice in selecting a "place-out" for eating Chinese food: Go where the Chinese eat, not where the Caucasians congregate.

"BLUE NOTE'S THREE DECADES OF JAZZ": 1939-1949 — 2 discs — Blue Note BST-89702; 1949-1959 — 2 discs — Blue Note BST-89903; 1959-1969 — 2 discs — Blue Note BST-89904:

These six LPs are the greatest thing in jazz re-issues in years. They are intended to commemorate the 30th anniversary of one of the most important jazz record labels around.

Blue Note was started by two German immigrants in 1939 with some boogie-woogie piano recordings featuring Albert Ammons and Meade Lux Lewis. They moved ahead slowly, never releasing very many albums, but always keeping the highest standards and presenting the cream of the jazz crop: Charlie Christian, Sidney Bechet, Teddy Wilson, Bunk Johnson, Thelonious Monk, Bud Powell, Miles Davis, Art Blakely and so on.

The albums are beautifully programmed and notated with all the fine details on pressing numbers, etc., that delight hot jazz record collectors. Although the record numbers and labels of the first two volumes clearly indicate stereo — and therefore re-channeled stereo, since Blue Note was about the last label to record in stereo — rest assured that the first four discs are ungimmicked, well - engineered monophonic sound in all its one-dimensional beauty.

Each of the albums is labeled Volume I, so there is evidently more coming for each decade period.

The first decade set includes tracks by Ammons, Bechet ("Summertime"), Earl Hines, George Lewis, James P. Johnson, Sidney De Paris, Ike Quebec, Benny Morton, Tadd Dameron, Monk and James Moody. The variety and classic quality of almost every track is breathtaking.

The second decade includes the proliferation of be bop, the appearance of chamber jazz, and the funk of people like Horace Silver. Heard are Bud Powell, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Miles Davis, Jimmy Smith, John Coltrane (in "Blue Train"), Sonny Rollins and Art Blakey (in Bobby Timmons' "Moanin' ").

The third decade presents in full stereo such classics as Jimmy Smith's "Back at the Chicken Shack," Eric Dolphy's "Out to Lunch," and Silver's "Song for My Father."

The second side is getting the most playing on my turntable, for it contains two of the (for me) greatest jazz numbers of the decade: Donald Byrd's remarkable hymn-like "Cristo Redentor," and Lee Morgan's non-stop swinger "The Sidewinder."

Bravo Blue Note for this set!

A WINTER'S LETTER TO ALE

Ale, man,
sailorman,
with redhairbraid brassring bouncing ticklish tempo to concertina swinging free from bellbottom's beltloop, your eyes.
r
a o
s were a sight to

I can see you still, squeezing out your handful of harmonicas for free beer
at the Lion's Share, cornering the seawind in song, casting off our footloose eyes,
off to see your sea.

your whistling walk along the wharf in Sausalito.

Why,
I'd swim Richardson's Bay to hear you play a horny hornpipe, or "God Save the Country" on that collapsible caliope.

I count you hard among my missing.

Herbs Add Spice To Gardening

Did you ever toss a swatch of bay leaves on a charcoal fire and soak up the aroma it imparts?

Do you like the fragrance of freshly-crushed mint in a tall glass of ice tea or lemonade?

Such enjoyment accounts in part for the growing infatuation of Marinites with fresh garden herbs.

THE REWARDS OF fresh herbs in culinary pursuits can make the difference between labor and pleasure in the kitchen—the difference between a so-so meal and work of art.

It is from this that the gardener derives so much pleasure from herbs.

While the use of herbs may be an art, the growing of them requires nothing special. The California Association of Nurserymen says this job can be as easy as it is pleasurable.

In some cases it's as simple as sowing seed. In most cases it's even simpler—since most nurseries offer pots of herb already started.

FOR A DELIGHTFUL arrangement, plant herbs in a large pottery strawberry jar—the effect is lovely, as the plants do nicely in such a container.

When planning a herb garden, the housewife is the best source of what should be planted. However, the basic garden should include such popular standbys as parsley, chives, thyme, mint, sage, marjoram, chamomile and rosemary. Savory, lemon balm, fennel, basil and tarragon are also easy and desirable.

Where to plant herbs?

PARSLEY MAKES an excellent border. Mint is traditionally at home by a dripping faucet. Sage, by virtue of its gray foliage, fits into most garden settings and the others do nicely in a pot or sunny garden spot. Fennel can even serve as a screen.

Keep them handy to the outdoor living area where they are easily available at barbecue time.

Don't hesitate to make use of their proximity. Experimenting with herbs has made more than one kitchen artist out of a former fry cook.

Certainly their aroma can add spice to your life, whether indoors or out.

Trees Are Part Of Ideal Lawn

The picture of a perfect lawn to us is one that contains two basic elements: grass and trees.

Not that you can't have a fine lawn with grass alone, but the addition of one or more trees often breaks up the rectangular effect and enhances the setting.

CHOOSING THE right tree for your lawn is as important as choosing the right kind of lawn seed. Modern landscape practice dictates the planting of small to medium size trees that will not overpower the landscape.

A favorite for this reason is the European White Birch. This white-barked deciduous tree is most effectively planted in groups of three at four to six feet apart. Growth is slender and graceful, the pendulous branches having a light, airy look about them.

You can search a long way before finding a better lawn tree than the Sweet Gum.

THIS IS A real journeyman in California gardens, a specimen tree that takes to the foreground or background with equal success. It is one of the few that really colors up in mild winter sections before dropping its leaves. Growth is tall, moderate. Leaves are maple-like and attractive spring through fall.

Among the evergreens for lawn planting, we can't say enough for the modest St. Mary's Magnolia. This one is a small counterpart of the magnificent Southern Magnolia — better in every way for use in most gardens. Leaves are glossy deep green on top, rust colored underneath. The blooms are larger than those of Southern Magnolia—10 to 12 inches in diameter.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Summer - blooming bulbs such as tigridias and cannas may still be planted, if you can find them. But time is running out.

✔ Start thinking about potted shrubs and trees for your outdoor living area. Tubbed marguerites make colorful companions throughout the summer months.

✔ If you have not done so yet, proceed with the pruning of your fuchsias.

✔ Ceanothus and other California natives are in bloom now. Select them at the nursery for an easy-to-care addition to your garden.

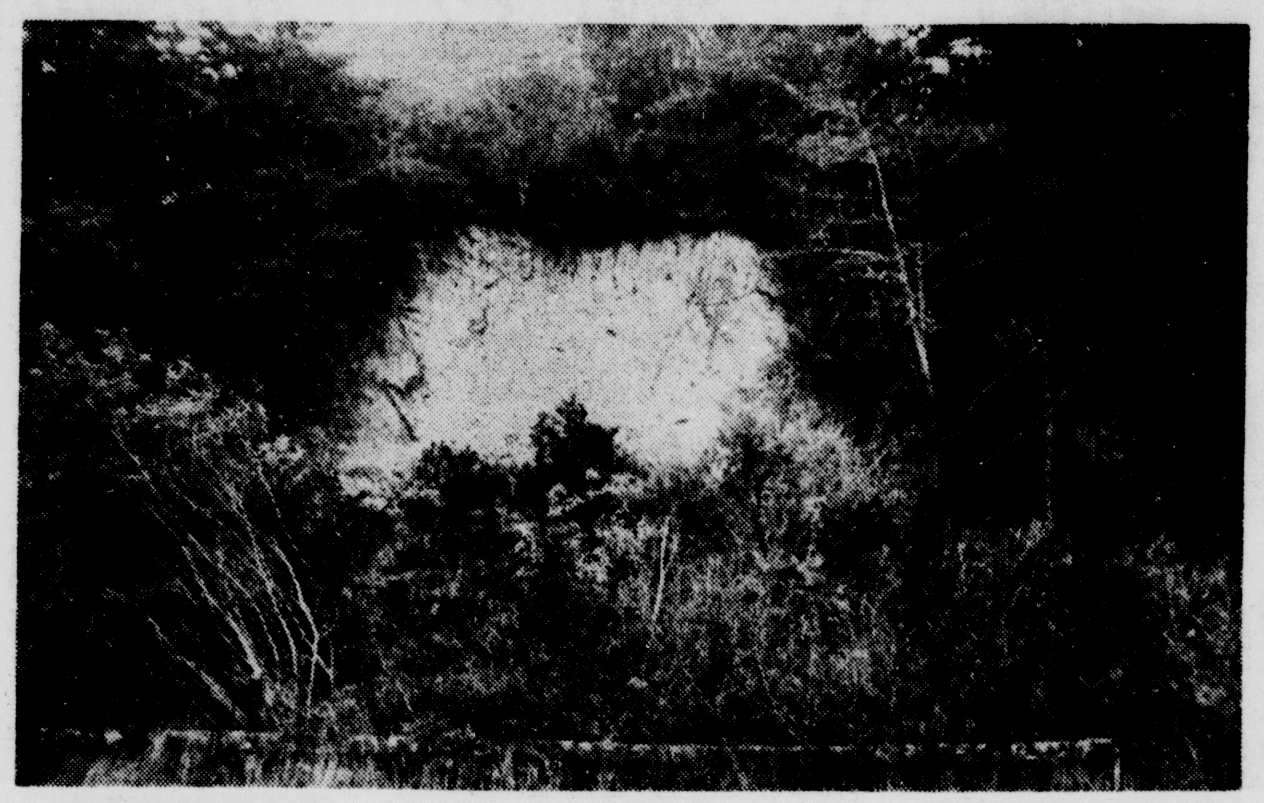
✔ A lawn feeding in the early spring is an excellent idea.



ONE OF THE MOST valuable services performed for man by trees is the holding of the soil. But not all trees perform with equal efficiency. C. B. Gearhart says that when this slide occurred near his West Marin home, the roots of many bays, poplars and oaks failed to hold. But the young pines he had planted in the slide area held fast. His conclusion: Pines, particularly when mature, are the best soil-holders and recommended for such problem spots. (Photo by C. B. Gearhart)

The Crape Myrtle Is A Beauty

If you have been driving innocently through the California countryside any time between June and September and come upon a cloud of bright pink crepe-paper floating just above the ground, it is quite possible you have seen a Crape-Myrtle in full bloom.

There are few things more beautiful.

ONCE YOU HAVE seen a Crape-Myrtle in full bloom you instinctively want to know where you can get one. At least, that would seem to be the natural reaction of any gardener. Yet this wonderfully hardy and beautiful tree (or shrub) is much less used than it ought to be.

For one thing, it could certainly brighten long stretches of our freeways and streets, for it has a long blooming season and when out of bloom is quite handsome, too. But above all it is extremely hardy. As long as it gets plenty of heat and proper neglect, it is happy.

Because the Crape-Myrtle is deciduous, we tend to overlook it in the spring. But as we grow to appreciate garden plants more, we learn that deciduous plants are extremely useful and have a year-around beauty quite worth cultivating.

THE CRAPE-MYRTLE is so showy in bloom that to get the full effect, we suggest that you pick a high spot in the garden, if you have one, where you can see it silhouetted against the sky. It is generally classed as a shrub but actually it very readily makes a small tree from 12 to 20 feet high.

It can be shaped nearly any way you prefer to suit your garden needs; however, as it grows older it tends to grow upward and drop its lower limbs, thus it is quite effective when used as a small tree (or big shrub if you prefer to think of it that way).

Any nurseryman will have a selection of Crape-Myrtles in various colors . . . white, pink, rose, lavender, purple and red.

THERE'S NOTHING retiring about these colors, they're just as bright as the crepe-paper after which they take their name and the blossoms have the crepe-paper crinkle, too. They virtually cover the plant during the long summer-fall season, standing well out from the olive green, rather oblong leaves.

The natural shape of the Crape-Myrtle is rounding and bushy but as the lower limbs drop, the semi-deciduous dark gray bark appears. The inner bark is pink and there is a constant "peeling" process that adds to the crinkling look produced by the flowers and has an interest of its own. The interesting limbs are constantly changing visually as the gray bark peels and exposes the pink inner bark.

As suggested before, with a pair of pruning shears you can shape this agreeable shrub-tree any way you wish, including espalier—that is, training it flat against a wall or fence.

GROW IT WITH natives, for although this is a Chinese tree or, some say, a native of the East Indies, it likes warm, dry, well-drained places and it likes to be left alone. Just what our California Lilac and Flannel-Bush and Cascara and Coffee Berry, Manzanita, etc., like.

It is at its showy best where it gets cold in the winter and hot in the summer for then, when it starts to take its annual nap along about October, the foliage becomes a rich orange or yellow. But it will perform in Marin. It will even do well on the desert provided it gets a little water now and then.

Whatever you do, don't give it too much fertilizer or water. To get maximum bloom you must leave it alone.

LAWN SEEDS SANS WEEDS

Today's lawn seed, unlike hayfield gleanings of yesteryear, seldom contains serious weeds. Care is taken every step of the way to avoid contamination.

In order to gain top price a grower keeps his field free of weeds; even if a few do escape his efforts they are not likely types maturing with the grass. Seed is further cleaned after it is brought from the field — to remove chaff, stem fragments and dust. Blowings and screenings eliminate objects different from the grass seed in size and shape.

Finally, the seed undergoes several inspections; reports on its quality are carried through to the label. If a package of lawn seed does not meet claims on the label, its sale is forbidden. So, a lawn seed purchaser need do little more than check the label to be sure he is purchasing "fine-textured" seed.

TO CULTIVATE OR WEED?

What's the difference between "weeding" and "cultivating" between rows of vegetables?

When you weed, you remove the unwanted plant, roots and all.

When you cultivate, you cut off the tops with the hoe or cultivator, leaving the roots in the soil. When weeds are tiny, cultivating is sufficient to kill them. When they are large, only weeding will do the job.

What To Do When A Drawer Sticks

Handyman's Page

By ANDY LANG

Because the inside of a bureau drawer is rarely finished, it is highly susceptible to excessive moisture and excessive dryness.

The resulting expansions and contractions cause the drawer to perform erratically at certain times of the year, the exact periods being determined by the conditions inside the home.

The most common bureau drawer trouble is binding. The drawer sticks when you open it and sticks when you close it.

UNLESS IT HAS come apart at some point, it is binding because moisture has entered the wood, swelling and warping it so that it will not move smoothly.

In many cases, this condition can be cured simply by rubbing paraffin or some other lubricant along the sliding edges. Do not make the common mistake of using soap, which may make the drawer slide more easily but will permit additional moisture to enter the wood, causing new trouble later on.

If the lubricant fails to work, it may be necessary to sand both the drawer edges and the slides, then reapply the lubricant. Take off only as much wood as needed, otherwise you will wind up with a drawer that is ill-fitting even though it opens and closes without binding. Because of this possibility, planing should be attempted only as a last resort.

THIS TYPE OF remedy requires a very fine touch to be certain that too much wood isn't removed.

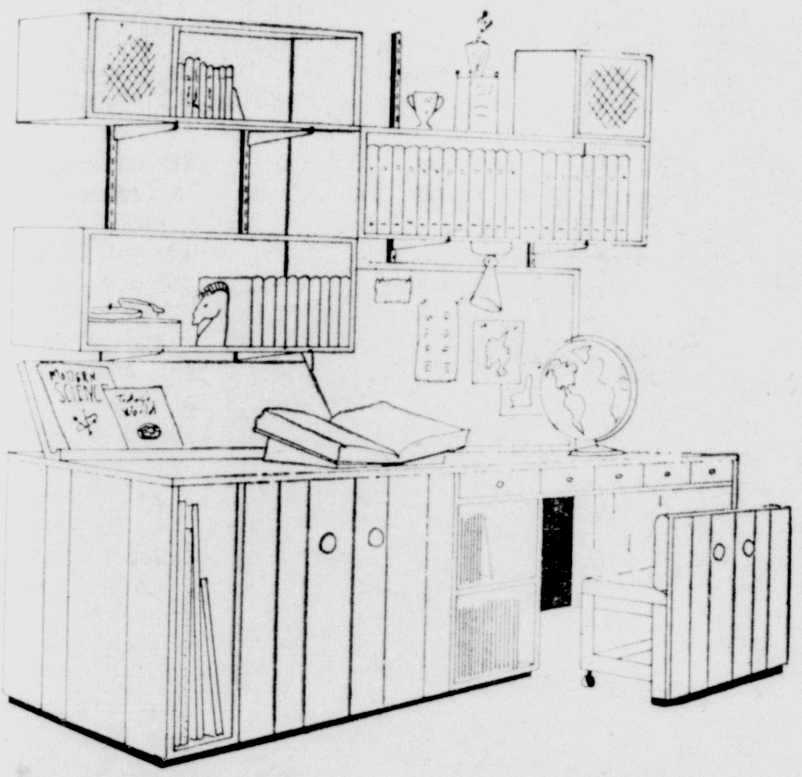
Sometimes you will find that the bottom of the drawer has come out of its groove, a condition usually caused by placing heavy objects in the drawer. In that event you will have to determine how to make the repair, depending on how bad the damage is. Be sure, too, that the frame which holds the drawer has not come loose at some point.

When a drawer opens partially but will not yield to moderate pressure, it can be loosened with the aid of heat. This can come from an electric bulb carefully placed in the opening until the wood shrinks or by keeping the entire bureau overnight in a room where there is a space heater or a dehumidifier. But first be certain that the cause of the stoppage isn't an object inside the drawer rather than warpage of the wood.

THE OFFENDER usually can be dislodged by a little patient poking around or by first removing another drawer. If it can't, remember that the backs of many bureaus usually are held in place with small screws or nails and can be easily removed.

Bureau drawers can be prevented from binding by giving all unfinished parts a coat of clear sealer. If you decide to do this, first remove all traces of paraffin or other lubricant, which can be reapplied after the sealer has dried.

A LEARNING LAIR



A COMPACT learning center can be a boon to all the family. Box shelves hold reference books, record player and speakers. Under-counter space works well for tall books, records and writing gear. The cabinet can house folding table and chairs. A pull-out seat is integrated by matching random-width board facing.

A learning center can be a place where Junior does his homework — and where dad and mom do a bit of studying as well.

The requisites are reference books, current magazines, TV, perhaps a moon map, plenty of shelving, and furniture that is both utilitarian and attractive.

For a distinctive cabinet, random-width board paneling of western pine, fir or cedar will work well and will be inexpensive.

Bookshelves should be cut from 12-inch boards, and a box treatment provides ideal storage.

Folding tables and chairs can all be stored in the cabinet.

And all this can fit along one wall, leaving much of the room for other uses.
